Israel OKs peace talks

Jerusalem (AP) — The Israeli cabinet accepted "without any dissenters or reservations" a new U.S. proposal for reconvening a Middle East peace conference at Geneva, Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor said Tuesday night.

Prime Minister Menahem Begin said the cabinet meeting: "The decision was unanimous."

Naor said the text of the U.S. proposal, known as a "working paper," would not be published in order to avoid undermining progress during current negotiations. The working paper now goes to the Arab countries for their consideration.

"The government approves the working paper on suggestions for the resumption of the Geneva peace conference," Noar said. It already had been agreed upon by President Carter, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman welcomed the decision and said the United States will transmit the working paper to the Arab governments.

"We believe the Israeli government decision is a further step toward working out practical procedures for convening the Geneva conference by the end of this year," the spokesman said.

"We note, however, that what has been accepted is still a working paper which may require further negotiation after the Arab governments have given their views on it."

Dayan, who carried the U.S. proposal to Israel Tuesday after his two-week visit to the United States, told reporters before the 4½-hour cabinet meeting that he had recommended its acceptance.

"If we want to go to Geneva with the Arabs, having their views in mind and taking care of our interests, then I think this is a good paper," Dayan said of the document he was to present to the cabinet.

The still-secret formula, which would include Palestinians in a unified Arab delegation at Geneva, was reached last Wednesday after a six-hour negotiating session between Carter and Dayan.

The working paper is understood to contain proposals for a three-stage conference where Israel would face the pan-Arab delegation at the opening of the Geneva conference. Political observers here regard this as an important Israeli concession since the Jewish state has always insisted on bilateral negotiations with each of the Arab countries.

After the opening session, the conference would split up into bilateral committees where Israel would negotiate the issues with each Arab state individually.

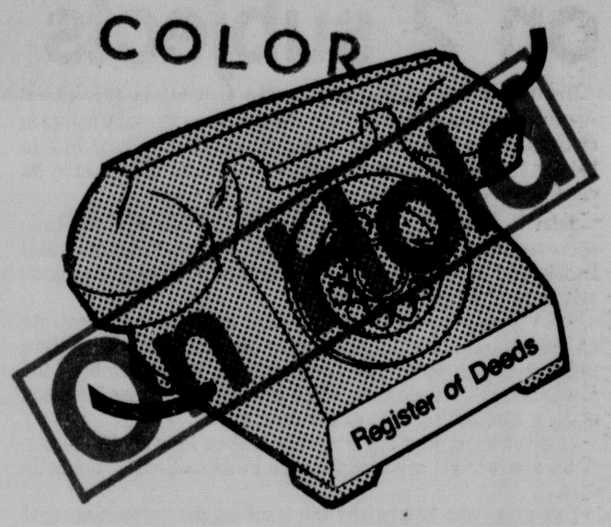

Finally, Israel would meet with Jordan, Egypt and the Palestinians to decide the future of the occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan River which Israel captured in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Neither Israeli nor U.S. officials have explained how the Palestinians are to participate at Geneva or whether they would be able to join the talks independent of the Jordanian or Egyptian delegations.

Naor reasserted that Israel would not negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization as the Arabs have demanded. He said the question of Palestinian representation is covered in the working paper but would not elaborate.

At the United Nations, PLO spokesman Faruk Kaddumi told the General Assembly Tuesday night the Palestinians must take part in peace negotiations and their representatives must be the PLO.

Dayan has said several times recently that Israel is willing to include at Geneva those Palestinian Arabs who are residents of the Gaza Strip and the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. Israeli officials also have said they would not "check credentials" and that the Palestinians could be PLO sympathizers.

Deeds office hard to phone

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Suppose you want to find out the legal description of a piece of property in Lancaster County. The answer should be as close as the nearest telephone.

But it isn't, at least not during busy times of the day when the county register of deeds office is swamped with deskwork.

If you try calling the office between 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., the chances are you'll get a busy signal. If you go through the County-City Building switchboard, you'll be put on hold — perhaps indefinitely.

"One man who was desperate to get his legal description called on a Friday and held for 45 minutes before giving up," switchboard supervisor Vicki Vollstedt reported.

The man called back again the following Monday, but still couldn't get through, she said.

The office has two incoming lines, but one of them is unavailable for most of the day because it is kept on hold, switchboard operators report.

Sometimes when there are several calls at once, switchboard operators have gone to the deeds office and discovered that both lines were on hold to prevent calls from coming in.

"Sometimes we take both phones off the hook when everyone is busy with other work," said Deputy Register of Deeds Wilbur Hibberd.

By this method, the staff cuts off incoming calls completely for periods up to one-half hour, Hibberd said.

Answering questions by telephone does not have top priority, Register of Deeds Kenneth Ferguson says. His office is required by statute to record and index deeds, mortgages and other documents related to county real estate, but it is not required to provide this information over the phone, he says.

"Most cities the size of Lincoln don't give out this information by phone," he said. With a staff of five clerk-typists, Ferguson contends the office just can't handle the volume of phone calls.

"We have to record 200 to 250 instruments (legal papers) daily," he said. This requires between 800 and 900 entries in various legers and indexes.

By law, his office is not allowed to have a backlog of clerical work. Every item brought in to be filed must be entered that same day, even if it is brought in one minute before closing time, he said.

Ferguson has asked the county board for more staff, but his request was turned down this year due to a freeze on any new positions in any county department.

His $120,923 budget for the current fiscal year is small in proportion to the money he brings in, he says in justification of his request for more staff. In 1976, he collected $248,500 in filing fees and the county's share of state revenue stamp receipts.

County Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton says Ferguson is "just being obstinate" about the telephone. It's not a problem of insufficient staff, but poor management of the staff, Hamilton said.

Meanwhile, the County-City Building switchboard has to take the flak from angry people.

"The operators take one heck of a lot of verbal abuse because of this," said Building Administrator Don Porter. "It's hard for a person to stay nice when he's put on hold for half an hour."

Operators say the office isn't always as busy as Ferguson claims. They say they have seen the clerks reading magazines or just talking when both phones were on hold.

One operator, Mary Hergenrader, reported that a telephone company workman checked out the situation recently. While both lines were on hold, the worker said four of the girls did not appear to be busy and the other was crocheting.

Ferguson says his clerks are busy all day long. "Those operators don't know what we do in here," he said.

One caller Monday held the line from 4 p.m. until 4:29 p.m. waiting for the lines to clear. When the switchboard was finally able to ring the office, the deeds staff refused to answer because it was closing time.

"We think people are being nice if they only cuss us once," Ms. Vollstedt said.

Clothing missing, inventory a 'mess'

Washington (AP) — The Army estimated Tuesday that it has on hand $118.5 million less in clothing and other equipment than it thought it had.

Lt. Gen. Marvin D. Fuller, the Army's inspector general, called the situation a "mess" and said "the biggest problem is in sloppy inventory procedures." He guessed that about 5% of the missing material was stolen.

"We didn't find any weapons missing," Fuller said.

Meat, chicken too toothsome

Hialeah, Fla. (AP) — Hungry and tired after two days of freedom, a docile 500-pound Kodiak bear named Chow was recaptured Tuesday afternoon with the help of some meat and chicken, a lasso and a tranquilizer.

"We've had two days of hell here," said Officer Victor Valladares of Hialeah Gardens, a Miami suburb. The bear escaped from his pen Sunday while its owner, a movie producer, was out of town.

Better retirement benefits urged by state employes' spokesmen

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Spokesmen for state employes Tuesday urged the Legislature's Retirement Systems Committee to improve retirement benefits for state government workers.

Especially in need, they said, are longtime state employes who are currently retiring or about to do so.

Benefits for service in state government prior to establishment of the state retirement system in 1963 are inadequate, senators were told.

In some cases, Assistant Game and Parks Commission Director Bill Bailey said, longtime state employes are forced to live their final retirement years "in poverty."

Some receive state benefits of only $35 or $40 a month, he said.

Roger Schulz, executive director of the Nebraska Association of Public Employes, said Nebraska's "prior service" benefits need to be increased to adequately provide for the government worker who performed many years of service to the state before the retirement system took effect.

Even for all state employes, the current system provides for a "very low" contribution by the state, Schulz said.

Both the employe and the state contribute about 4½% of the salary level to the retirement plan, he said.

Nationally, the average contribution is 4.6% by the employe and about 7% by the state, he said.

Nebraska ranks in the lower one-fifth of the states in terms of state contribution, Schulz told the committee.

Both Schulz and Bailey suggested that the Legislature consider providing for automatic cost-of-living adjustments for state government retirees to help them meet the advancing costs of inflation.

Earlier, the committee instructed its staff to begin research on Nebraska laws to see how they would be affected by proposed federal legislation to abandon mandatory retirement requirements for employes at age 65.

"If that thing goes," Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue said, "it's going to have a tremendous impact on us."

Even if the federal goverment does not approve such a change, Sen. Jack Mills of Big Springs said, "I think there are a lot of people who are going to say . . . we ought to be looking at our own laws."

Town has just the place for Congress

Hannibal, Mo. (AP) — It started as a tongue-in-cheek suggestion in a Washington magazine that Congress abandon the crowded capital and move to Hannibal.

It was meant as a joke, and not willing to be outdone in humor, several Hannibal officials have responded in kind.

David Givan, a city councilman, wryly suggested a suitable location might be found for Congress not far from the Mississippi River waterfront.

"We've got a couple of vacant warehouses that would be just the thing," he said.

Califano says Congress holds many hostage

Washington (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said Tuesday it is "grossly unfair to hold the vulnerable people of our nation and thousands of federal and state employes hostage" in a dispute over paying for poor women's abortions.

Failure to enact a bill providing funds for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare is seriously disrupting his department's operations, he told Democratic congressional leaders.

In letters to Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and several committee chairmen, Califano said, "it is imperative . . . that the Congress either enact the appropriations bill this week or pass a continuing resolution" that would provide temporary funding of HEW salaries and operations.

If Congress does not act this week, Califano said, benefits for thousands of poor people, children, the sick, aged and disabled will be cut off.

The annual funding bill for the two departments and several related agencies is stalled between the House and Senate in a dispute over federal funding of abortions for poor women.

As a result, the appropriation for the last fiscal year expired Sept. 30 with no new money available to pay department employes, and money for various programs is about to run out.

HEW spokeswomen earlier had said that the department's key programs would continue indefinitely. However, as the deadline passed and funding expired, it became clear that a number of secondary programs and support services would be affected.

State rehabilitation agencies, for instance, are running out of money to process claims for Social Security Disability benefits. While disabled recipients aren't affected, there won't be anyone to process new applications.

"We have been informed that as of Oct. 12, New York State will be unable to meet its payroll for employes to process the determinations," Califano said. "Texas has informed us that it will furlough 612 employes on Oct. 12 because of the lack of maternal and child health and State Health Department grants.

"Idaho does not have any carryover money to fund its nutrition and community services programs for the aging."

Before the month is out, Califano said, various other programs will begin to run out of money.

"If there is no appropriation by the end of the month, 475,000 black lung beneficiaries cannot receive their checks due the first week in November," the secretary said.

Other programs soon to be affected help finance state health programs, federal aid to schools with large numbers of government-dependent pupils, education for the handicapped and social services for the aged.

Califano told the congressional leaders if no agreement is possible by Thursday, "then I urge you to pass a continuing resolution, for however brief a period of time, so that public servants can continue to get paid and so that the old and the young, the disabled and the poor may receive benefits to which they are entitled."

Czechs hijack jet to Germany

Frankfurt, West Germany (AP) — Two uniformed airline employes brandishing pistols hijacked a Czechoslovak airliner on a domestic flight with 27 other persons aboard and surrendered a few hours later in Frankfurt.

Police said the pair, a man and a woman dressed in blue Czechoslovak Airlines uniforms, asked for political asylum. Police chief Knut Mueller said they would be held on charges of "endangering airline transportation."

It was the sixth time since 1970 that Czechoslovaks have defected to West Germany by diverting commercial airliners from the Communist-ruled country.

German authorities released the Soviet-built YAK 40 for return to Czechoslovakia with the other 24 passengers and three crewmen, and the official Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported it had arrived there safely.

CTK identified the hijackers as Vlastimil Toupalik, 30, and Ruzena Vlckova, 22. CTK said Toupalik faced charges at home of failure to pay alimony.

German police said the two "were not married to one another."

At first the hijackers refused to allow anyone to leave the plane and demanded it be refueled for a flight to Munich, 180 miles to the southeast.

Police said they dropped the demand, and surrendered after officials convinced them the special fuel was not immediately available.

German authorities said the hijackers, ground crew personnel, boarded the airliner in the western Czechoslovak resort town of Karlovy Vary, formerly Carlsbad, for a flight to Prague. Carlsbad was once a watering spot which attracted royalty and high society from all over the world, but in recent years has been the starting point or scheduled destination of plane hijackings.

GOP splits on 2 subjects

Bretton Woods, N.H. (AP) — The Republican Governors' Association wound up a two-day meeting here Tuesday united in criticizing the Democratic administration but split on how to bolster support for the party and on issues to be addressed by its candidates.

John B. Connally, former governor of Texas and one-time secretary of the Treasury, joined GOP National Chairman Bill Brock and Gov. Pierre S. du Pont of Delaware in harsh criticism of President Carter.

But Connally's suggestion that GOP candidates concentrate on issues of state interest, such as prisons and welfare programs, and stay away from national issues, such as the Panama Canal treaties, drew fire from Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire, host of the meeting.

"I don't know why any governor, unless he wants to pick a fight, needs to get involved with the Panama Canal," Connally said.

Thomson, who has raised the issue of the treaties several times and has criticized them as a "giveaway," said Connally was wrong. He said a governor should not head "a district with boundaries around it . . . The governor of any state should speak out on any issue that affects the future of the citizens of his state."

And Brock's advice that the party seek out young, attractive candidates, including women, blacks and Hispanics, was echoed by Gov. James R. Thompson of Illinois but turned aside by Govs. Thomson, Mills E. Godwin Jr. of Virginia and James Edwards of South Carolina.

The party's doors have not been closed to women and minorities, but "we haven't gone out and taken them by the hand and walked them in," Brock said.

Godwin said the party should not compromise its basic principles by running candidates who do not fully hold to Republican philosophy.

"A party that has no principles and values doesn't deserve to win," Brock agreed. "But I'd like to add that a party that says, 'You can't belong' doesn't deserve to win either."

Thompson supported Brock, saying, "We should move to recognize those concerns of the American people that apparently more people up to this time think the Democrats have had better answers for."

But Edwards backed up Godwin.

"I think we should quit talking about the need to open the door. As far as I'm concerned, the door has never been closed, and I'm getting a little tired of hearing about it," he said.

Thomson said he agreed with Godwin and Edwards that "middle America, meaning the taxpayers, not those on relief, not the international bankers, is increasingly conservative" and "if we are right on our principles, then a broader spectrum will join us."

There was no disagreement to Connally's assertion that the Carter administration is not doing what it should to help solve the problems of unemployment, the growing trade deficit and unsold farm surpluses.

"The job that's being done today domestically and internationally is, in my opinion, the worst job that I have seen done in my lifetime," Connally said.

Brock and du Pont indicated that the GOP's next campaign may be built around Carter.

Merger of agencies planned

Washington (AP) — President Carter said Tuesday he plans to combine the U.S. Information Agency and the bureau that handles cultural exchanges into one Agency for International Communication, pledging it would not act covertly or spread propaganda.

The President also promised to keep the USIA's boradcast Voice of America independent and objective.

'The new agency's activities must be straightforward, open, candid, balanced and representative," Carter declared in a message to Congress outlining the second of his plans for government reorganization. "They will not be given over to the advancement of the views of any one group, any one party or any one administration.

"The agency must not operate in a covert, manipulative or propagandistic way."

Carter added: "Under this administration, VOA will be solely responsible for the content of its news broadcasts — for there is no more valued coin than candor in the international marketplace of ideas."

Although the reorganization plan would not give VOA the entirely independent status some of its officials had sought, Carter guaranteed to keep "the Voice of America's news gathering and reporting functions independent and objective."

Limit to 'junk calls' is aim of bill

Washington (UPI) — Legislation to limit unsolicited commercial advertising by telephone was proposed Tuesday in the House and Senate, with backers branding such "junk calls" the "ultimate invasion of privacy to millions of Americans."

The authors, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and Sen. Wendell Anderson, D-Minn., said they were introducing their identical bills because the volume of advertising calls already is too high and is "likely to soar" soon with a fully automated "telephone selling machine" on the market that will make calls even cheaper than mail.

Under the measure, telephone companies would have to give their subscribers at least one chance a year to indicate if they do not want to get such calls. Any firms using telephone advertising then would be required to get a list of those subscribers and delete the numbers from call lists.

Violators would face a maximum penalty of a $1,000 fine and 30 days in prison for each illegal call. To allow for honest errors, prosecution could not begin until authorities received 10 complaints against the same firm in one area.

"Every day thousands of people are dragged to their phones only to have a cooing voice try to sell them the ultimate product without which their lives would not be complete," Aspin and Anderson said in a joint statement.

"This is not routine advertising; this is the ultimate invasion of privacy to millions of Americans who want to tend their gardens, eat their dinners or chat with their neighbors in peace."

The lawmakers, who claimed 40 co-sponsors of their bill, said "non-commercial callers" such as chairities and poll-takers would not be restricted.

Aspin and Anderson said said the newest selling machine on the market is able to dial numbers automatically, deliver a tape-recorded message when a phone is answered, and record an order before going on to the next prospective buyer. It could make about 1,000 calls a day, they said.

They also said some of this equipment can carry a sales message of up to six minutes, and their bill would limit that to one minute.

In defending the need for the legislation, they said: "To imagine the scale of intrusion we can expect if we take no action, count the number of pieces of junk mail you receive today; then imagine being called to the telephone that many times tonight to be greeted by a recorded advertising pitch."

System to help budding farmers proposed

Washington (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland Tuesday proposed a new farm mortgage system to help start young, low-income and minority families in farming.

Bergland said it is in the national interest to provide an opportunity for farm ownership to "young farm families who are buying their first piece of land, minority small farmers, and others . . . (who) cannot reasonably be expected to initially pay the full market interest rate."

Bergland outlined his plan to a Senate agriculture subcommittee as part of a package of proposed changes in Agriculture Department farm and rural development credit programs.

The proposal also included a request to double existing ceilings on individual farm mortgage and operating loans insured by the Farmers Home Administration. Bergland also proposed a plan which would raise interest rates for many farmer-borrowers.

Bergland said although most farmers seeking FmHA mortgage loans under his plan would pay interest rates above the current 5% ceiling, the proposal would give him authority to offer easier terms to some borrowers.

The National Farmers Union strongly opposed the plans for higher interest rates.

But Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., proposed a compromise retaining the current 5% rate for the first $100,000 borrowed from the government and allowing higher rates on the second $100,000.

Bergland's proposal would raise the ceiling on FmHA mortgage loans from the current $100,000 to $200,000 to keep pace with higher farm land prices. The proposal also would raise the limit on FmHA farm operating loans from the current $50,000 to $100,000.

Vet-priority ruling set aside

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court Tuesday set aside a lower court ruling that had threatened 46 state programs aimed at giving military veterans priority for public job openings.

Voting 6-3, the justices ordered a three-judge federal court in Massachusetts to restudy that state's veterans' preference law in light of a recent Supreme Court decision making it more difficult to prove unconstitutional discrimination.

The lower court had ruled that the Massachusetts veterans' preference law, similar to those in all states except Arkansas, Mississippi, New Mexico and South Carolina, fostered unconstitutional sex discrimination against women.

Among other matters considered Tuesday, the high court:

— Agreed to decide whether the death penalty is a valid punishment for persons convicted of murder who did not actually kill anyone.

An Akron, Ohio, woman convicted in the 1975 killing of a pawnbroker, received a death sentence under a "felony murders" law. Such laws charge a defendant with murder if he or she is linked to a crime in which a life is taken.

— Agreed to decide whether members of Congress and their aides are immune from private suits even when their activities are judged unconstitutional.

The case involves a 1969 suit against Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., by a Kentucky couple. It asks the court to decide whether the constitutional grant of immunity to members of Congress carrying out their legislative duties extends to possible violations of others' constitutional rights.

— Set aside a lower court's ruling that could have — and still might — cost the U.S. Postal Service some $500 million in refunds to consumers. At issue is the validity of a temporary rate increase that boosted the price of a first-class stamp from 10 to 13 cents in December 1975.

— Agreed to decide whether a criminal defendant's right to a fair trial is impaired by the traditional warning given juries about not taking into account the fact that a defendant did not testify in his own behalf.

In the veterans' preference case, the court's majority ruled that the lower court should reconsider the case in light of a 1976 Supreme Court decision which declared that "disproportionate effects" are not the sole determining factors in proving illegal discrimination.

The court said then, in a case involving a police department qualifying test in Washington, D.C., that an intention to discriminate must be proved as well.

While the remand does not explicitly tell the lower court to reverse its initial finding of discrimination, the clear indication is that the justices expect the lower court will do so.

The veterans' preference law was challenged in 1975 by Helen Feeney, a former state employe.

On three occasions, Mrs. Feeney had taken Civil Service exams in applying for better-paying state jobs. Each time, her ranking was lowered because veterans, always men, whose test grades were lower received the benefit of a veterans' preference formula.

The lower court noted that only 2 per cent of Massachusetts' veterans are women, and noted also that until 1967 federal law prohibited women from making up more than 2 per cent of the total personnel in the nation's armed forces.

Decision for affirmative action urged

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court, preparing to hear arguments in a controversial civil rights case, was urged by 11 black members of Congress Tuesday to issue "a strong forthright" endorsement of affirmative action programs to insure jobs and schooling for racial minorities.

In an indirect way, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission made the same plea as it released a report defending such programs as necessary to compensate minorities and women for past discrimination.

The Congressional Black Caucus and the commission took their positions in advance of oral arguments scheduled Wednesday in the Supreme Court in the case of the regents of the University of California versus Allan Bakke. Some civil rights groups say the high court ruling could be the most significant in two decades for the future of race relations in America.

The case involves Bakke's claim that he was denied admission to the university's medical school at Davis because he is white. He contends that black applicants with lower test scores were admitted ahead of him because the university followed a program to select 16 minority applicants for each entering class of 100.

The California Supreme Court upheld Bakke's claim and ruled that the university system amounted to unconstitutional discrimination.

The 11 black House members who compose the Congressional Black Caucus urged the high court to reverse the California decision and affirm the constitutionality of the university program.

"The future health and welfare of this nation, both domestically and internationally, dictate that there must be no judicial retreat on the constitutional mandate that equality and freedom must be meaningful concepts for all the people of our country," the caucus said in a brief submitted as a friend of the court.

"Any vacillation or hesitation by this court in reaffirming the fundamental principles at stake in this case may well sound the death knell of the progress made since this court's decision" outlawing school desegregation in 1954, the caucus continued.

In its report, the Civil Rights Commission called affirmative action programs "promising instruments in obtaining equality of opportunity."

The commission statement did not deal directly with the Bakke case, but contained obvious references to the forthcoming court ruling.

"A new decision implying that in 1977 this nation has reached a state of progress sufficient to justify the abandonment of any significant component of affirmative action programs would have disastrous consequences," the commission said.

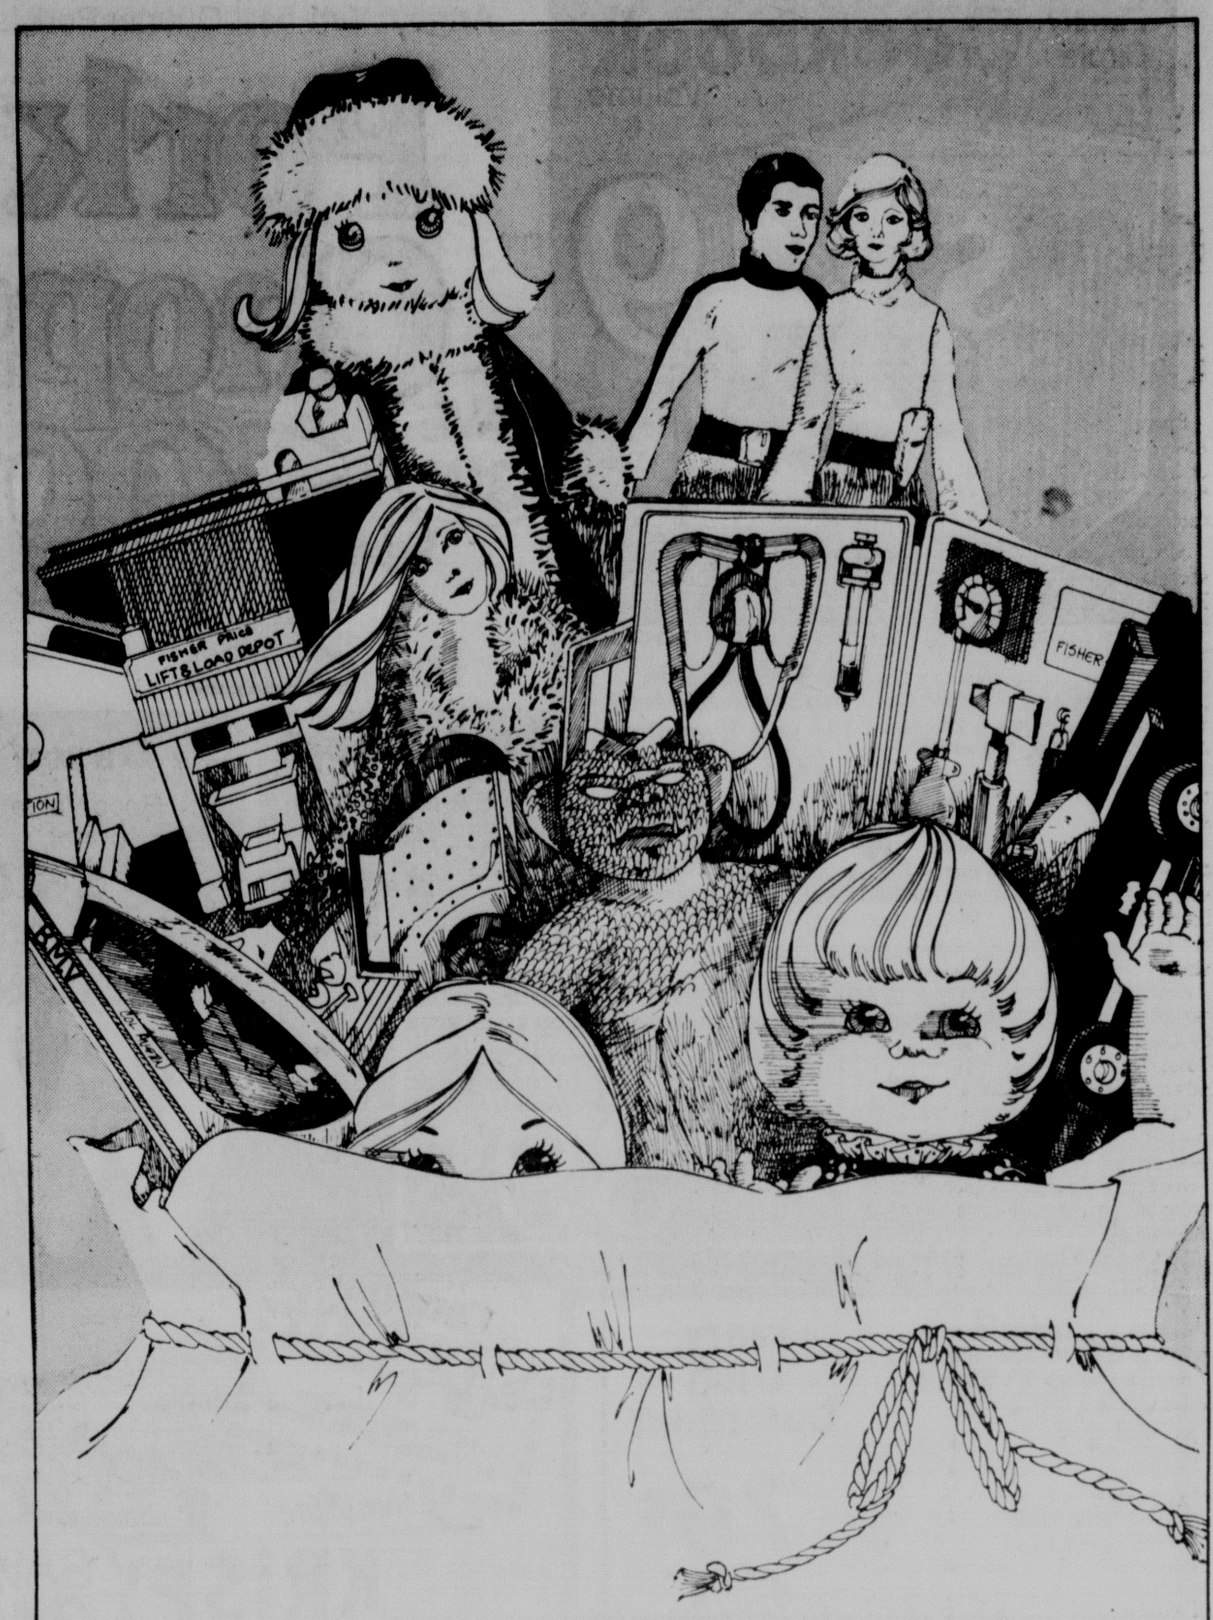

"Such a decision could only be reached by ignoring the crushing burden of unemployment, poverty and discrimination facing black people and others whose skins are dark," the report continued.

Chicken ruling to be issued

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Tuesday to decide whether the giant producers who market more than 95% of the broiler chickens Americans eat are "farmers" and thus exempt from some antitrust laws.

The court's decision will have a major impact on the chicken industry, which had sales of $3 billion last year for broilers alone and $7.1 billion for all poultry products.

Beer policy at Pershing okay, but is 20% rule realistic?

All things considered, the City Council action liberalizing the liquor policy at Pershing Municipal Auditorium is a reasonable move.

The council voted 6-1 last week to allow beer to be served at sporting events such as boxing and wrestling matches, concerts and other activities geared to adults. In the past, dispensing of alcoholic beverages at the auditorium had been limited to private gatherings.

Permitting beer sales at selected public events at Pershing should have a positive effect on auditorium gate figures and it accommodates the wishes of those who like to have a cup of beer or so on an evening out.

The Lincoln Police Department opposed the policy change on the basis that it might present special enforcement problems. City officials will want to monitor the situation at Pershing to see if police fears are justified. The policy can be changed again to eliminate public beer sales if need be.

But we think the council and the Auditorium Advisory Board are on the right track in experimenting with a liberalized policy.

The only remaining problem as we see it is in determining whether an audience will have 20% or more people under 19, the legal drinking age. The new policy says that beer can be served at public events when the auditorium management expects that less than 20% of the people in the crowd will be under 19 years of age.

That might work for a Lawrence Welk concert, but it could be a tough call with respect to a host of other events including rock concerts.

Is somebody going to be checking IDs at the door to determine whether the crowd is of the proper age mix to allow beer sales?

It is unrealistic to think that in many cases such a judgment can be made with any degree of certainty.

Concorde opponents losing

The latest demonstration at New York's Kennedy Airport protesting possible landing rights for the supersonic Concorde airliner was a flop. Nearby residents and other anti-Concorde New Yorkers were unable to tie up traffic at Kennedy as a means of telling the British and French to keep their noisy airplane out of town.

The fight is still in court, but it looks as if the opponents of landing rights are losing. The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which controls Kennedy, may have to come up with new noise standards that are "reasonable" and apply to all aircraft, not just the Concorde, and the authority may have to do it quickly. This would pave the way for admitting Concorde. The Carter administration also favors Concorde landing rights at Kennedy. Plans are already in the works to land the supersonic plane at other American airports.

Only by entering the American market can the joint British-French project be made to come anywhere close to paving off. It has been an extravagant failure, a luxury in a new transportation age of austerity and sacrifice. The Concorde is a Hindenburg which travels faster than sound.

The U.S. once decided not to get into the SST business for sound economic and environmental reasons. The British and French saw a chance to undercut American domination of the aeronautics industry and ended up with a disastrously expensive lemon.

The Carter administration will not come out against landing rights for Concorde. The British have been pushing it because of a beleaguered economy and the French government sees American acceptance of Concorde as one means to keep the socialists and communists out of power. Any help the U.S. can give the present government may pay dividends in the parliamentary elections early next year.

But try telling people on this side of the Atlantic — especially those who live near airports where Concorde would land — that they should have to pay for the mistakes the British and French made when they tried to topple the U.S. from the pinnacle of the aeronautics world. Why should we have our environment defiled when we opted against our own SST?

Further efforts to protest Concorde, even if they are as feeble as the most recent one, will be viewed sympathetically in this corner.

If acceptance of Concorde meant saving our British and French allies from utter collapse — as did our intervention in the war against Hitler — Americans no doubt could put up with the annoyance and probable damage. But it doesn't all boil down to that. Arguments that the fate of western Europe hangs on Concorde entering the American market are tenuous indeed.

The economic scene

By Thomas Mullaney
New York Times Writer

New York — A new coined word — OMA — has entered the lexicon of international businessmen and political leaders. It stands for "orderly marketing agreement," and it is a quota-type pact that governments arrange mutually when a sudden surge of imports of a specific product by one nation jeopardizes employment, production and sales of the other country's industry.

So far, the incidence of the OMA device has been rather limited, though growing. It may, however, become a more prevalent mechanism to stem the growing protectionist tide and create a bridge over the treacherous waters of trade warfare until a more prosperous era is reached in international economic conditions.

The implications of OMA will be in the spotlight in the United States this week at two significant meetings. In New York the Conference Board will assemble a permanent group of corporate executives and government officials, including Robert S. Strauss, the Carter administration's special representative for trade negotiations, to discuss international trade issues and policy. Then, on Thursday, there will be a White House meeting for steel company executives, labor leaders and members of the congressional steel caucus to analyze the import problems of the American steel industry, which have become a critical national issue in recent months with the spread of plant closings and employe layoffs.

Some analysts have recommended that the United States arrange an orderly marketing agreement on steel with Japan and European steel-exporting nations to reduce shipments here, which are now filling more than 20% of the domestic market. Such export-limiting pacts were made earlier this year by the United States on Japanese color television shipments and on shoes from South Korea and Taiwan.

To the doctrinaire free trader, the OMA's are just as anathema as tariffs, formal quotas, restrictive regulations and the broad range of other non-tariff barriers that stifle the flow of goods from one country to another. They are seen as impediments to economic growth and as instruments of greater inflation.

They don't satisfy old hard-line protectionists either because they merely ease the damage done to home industry without assuring any long-range solutions to the problem. And when an OMA curbs the shipments of a particular product, they may induce the affected export nation to look at the export potential of other commodities to make up for the loss of earnings.

From whence, therefore, does support for OMA's originate? It comes mostly from political sources and business leaders, too, who wish to avoid disastrous trade confrontations and a return to the nightmarish "beggar-thy-neighbor" consequences of the 1930's.

In that period of severe economic depression and extensive unemployment around the world, the volume of international trade was sharply curtailed under the influence of highly restrictive bilateral agreements in many forms. They included tough quotas on imports between pairs of trading partners, bartering, blocked currency deals and sometimes impenetrable customs procedures.

Behind the latest rise of protectionist sentiment is the fact that the volume of world trade, according to an estimate by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in Geneva, will grow only by 6% this year because of the halting recuperation of many Western nations from the recession of 1973-75. Last year's trade expansion was about 11%, putting the global total above the $1-trillion mark.

With trade slowing, unemployment has been increasing again in many countries. At the end of June, there were about 14 million persons out of work in the leading western nations — a rise of 500,000 since the beginning of the year.

As a result, several other countries besides the United States have taken actions to curb imports as a method of aiding their own industries. The Common Market countries as a group have imposed limits on Japanese steel exports. France and Britain have been seeking to reduce Japanese auto penetration in their markets. And Canada has extended restrictions on textile imports.

It is true, of course, that the bulk of world trade is moving without the fetters of serious restriction, but the amount covered by voluntary or mandatory curbs has been steadily rising, and apparently will become larger unless governments follow promises made at the London summit meeting in May and at the recent International Monetary sessions in Washington to stem the protectionism.

The GATT organization is particularly concerned about the growing protectionist trend. Olivier Long, secretary-general, said recently that the value of trade subject to new protectionist measures in the last three years alone has been equivalent to between $30 billion and $40 billion a year.

In citing that statistic, R. D. Muldoon, New Zealand's minister of finance, said at the monetary meeting that two things are essential: "Not only a halt to expanding protectionism, as many are advocating, but a reversal of the protectionist policies which in some cases have been adopted for a long time."

As he and others point out, such a course may be politically difficult, but it would be enlightened self-interest for all countries in the long-run. Less protectionism is needed for world growth, prosperity and to enable exporting nations to earn the foreign exchange that so many need for the welfare of their own people and to repay heavy debt.

Today's 'Voyage to Darkness'

By Mary Costello
ERR Staff Writer

Washington — On Oct. 22, 2137 B.C., so the story goes, two royal astronomers in China named Ho and Hsi were too busy drinking rice wine to have observed the eclipse of the sun, an event they had also failed to forecast. The terrified king, once he recovered a semblance of composure, dispatched Ho and Hsi to the execution chamber. Had they been around 4114 years later, Ho and Hsi could have had their rice wine and viewed the eclipse in total comfort aboard two luxury liners off the west coast of the United States. They would have had plenty of time to prepare for the cruise, since eclipse forecasting is now a science.

A total eclipse of the sun will occur today, Wednesday, Oct. 12, but the only place it can be seen is from ships in the Pacific Ocean. Betwen 1,200 and 1,600 astonomy buffs will be aboard two luxury liners, one on a 17-day cruise from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the other on an 11-day journey from Los Angeles. Both ships will head for a spot 1,200 miles southwest of Los Angeles to view the eclipse. The trip, which is called "Voyage to Darkness," will feature a "Science at Sea" program conducted by 39 experts, including anthropologist Margaret Mead.

Solar eclipses occur when a new moon comes between the sun and the earth, resulting in a period of darkness from a few seconds to more than seven minutes. Worldwide, there is a solar eclipse about once every 18 months, but it will not be until Feb. 26, 1979, that Americans — in the Northwest — will have the opportunity to see one. After that, the next total eclipse of the sun over the United States will not take place until 2107.

The word "eclipse" is derived from an ancient Greek word meaning to disappear or to leave life behind. For primitive peoples, the sun signified light and life. An eclipse indicated that some sinister force even more powerful than the all-powerful sun was seeking to destroy the very basis of life. Anthropologists report that ancient tribes prayed, danced, shouted, lighted fireworks and shot arrows to frighten and destroy the enemy of the sun during an eclipse. In some parts of the world, the fear and suspicion linger on.

During the solar eclipse of June 30, 1973, terrified nomads in central Africa were observed shouting: "God, God, please release the sun."

Don't push the Carter panic button yet

Tom Wicker

New York — Is it yet time for those who have wished him well to press the panic button about the performance of a President Carter who seems, as the months go along, more and more inept, inexperienced and unwilling to stand behind his own professions?

On this scorecard, the answer is "No, not yet." But the rounds are slipping by and — to stretch the boxing anlogy to its limit — Carter may soon need a knockout or at least a knockdown to stay in contention.

Just since Labor Day, the President has taken an unmerciful battering on his Middle East policy, the energy bill, his welfare and tax reform proposals, the Panama Canal treaties, his stubborn defense of Bert Lance, and what appears to many critics as a tendency to bend before pressure.

Worse, much of the criticism of Carter is coming these days from people who have looked to him for leadership — blacks, for example, and the liberals who were supporting him in his opposition to the deregulation of natural gas. Worse still, much of what is being criticized looks like sheer bungling — a far cry from that calm, businesslike, efficient executive management of which Carter made so much in his campaign. For example:

—No matter how it is explained, the administration's abrupt turn-about to smash the anti-deregulation filibuster — without advance warning to the filibusterers and at the sacrifice of Vice President Mondale's good standing with senators the administration needs — was an unnecessary legislative and political botch.

—The failure of advance consultation on and explanation of the Soviet-American statement on the Middle East, followed by the appearance of retreat before Ed Koch and the Israeli lobby, was amateurish and bewildering.

—Handing Republicans the initiative on the Canal controversy by failing to offer interpretation created — like the dogged defense of Lance — unnecessary problems that an astute political manager should have been avoiding. The vindictive bill regarding veterans whose discharges had been upgraded under Carter's own policies largely vitiated the effect of those policies and what had seemed to be his promise to end the bitter divisions of the Vietnamese War.

But all that has to be put in some perspective. In fact, Carter is a newcomer to Washington, and that's not bad; that's good. But a year of fumbling for the levers is about the price that ought to be expected for such an infusion of new blood and ideas. If he's seemed too willing to compromise so far, that's better than the stiff-necked intransigence Georgia opponents predicted for him. And the art of compromise, like the proper touch with Congress, takes a little developing.

Ed Koch
. . . Carter seemed to retreat

Besides, Carter came to Washington at a time when Congress, newly equipped with its long-needed budget committees and emboldened by its Nixon-years conflicts with the imperial presidency, was ready to give any administration trouble. And while the White House is anxious to picture Carter as a lion of courage for presenting such a belligerent Congress three of the toughest domestic issues — an energy bill, tax and welfare reform — the truth is that Carter has bitten off more than any president could reasonably be expected to chew. But there will be other years and other congresses, and Carter offered solid evidence in 1976 that he can learn and grow under pressure.

On the Middle East, moroever, tactical ineptitude may obscure the facts that Carter's diplomacy has got the Palestinians to agree to less than PLO representation at Geneva, the Israelies to accept some form of Palestinian presence, and the Soviets more nearly in co-operation with the United States than ever before. He seems, in the process, to be mending his fences with Moscow on SALT and other issues. As for the senseless furore over Panama, Carter inherited rather than created the necessity for the treaties, and their opponents are on riskier political ground than he.

Nevertheless, and in whatever perspective, Carter's performance to date can hardly be judged a winner or even very promising. His forthcoming foreign tour will get him some big but ephemeral headlines, when what he needs is the kind of solid, imaginative action that can regain the political initiative and the confidence of his party. The economy, hesitant and flaccid, may offer the best opportunity for such action, as will be suggested in another article.

Grateful to Zorinsky

Columbus, Neb.

The Star says Sen. Zorinsky saved a "few hundred thousand dollars" but that his stand on natural gas will "cost us millions."

We Nebraskans are very grateful to Mr. Zorinsky for saving our money and his fan mail will prove it.

As for natural gas, The Star's ideas cost our country thousands of jobs and thousands of frozen homes and factories last winter. We don't want that again. What is the matter with The Star's editorial writer? Why can't he see that?

R. F. McINTYRE

What courts want

Blair, Neb.

Wally Barnett, Lincoln, the Unicameral Judiciary Committee chairman, states a tact but draws a wrong conclusion in a recent comment. I doubt that anyone expected very many lay people to attend recent hearings on Nebraska's pending crime code revision, not even the chairman.

Barnett's conclusion? "Apparent lack of interest in the crime law."

This latter simply isn't true. There is considerable interest, deep concern and even alarm. People feel helpless. Why should they take the time to go to such hearings, with little hope of being listened to seriously by such lawyer-court-dominated meetings? The lawyers and courts KNOW what they want. It's already in the four bills passed over the governor's veto earlier this year. They want more plea bargaining, courts which dominate the entire picture and judges playing God and prosecutors and courts clearing their dockets by the simple expedient of plea bargaining cases out of existence or putting everyone on probation.

This, as crime mounts higher. The only deterrent yet found to reduce crime is fear of loss of life, liberty or prestige. The courts and slick defense lawyers and incompetent prosecutors have removed this fear.

Eric Youngberg

Lincoln, Neb.

I am a resident, voter and tenant in the Clinton area. I should like the City Council to know that I oppose the rejection of Eric Youngberg's reappointment to the Community Development Task Force.

I do not always agree with Mr. Youngberg's viewpoints, nor do I always agree with Mr. Willard Woodside's (our neighborhood president). Yet it is my belief that we the people of the Clinton neighborhood may find our strength in our diversity.

My impressions of Mr. Youngberg are such that I find him fully competent, open-minded and ready to compromise. He is willing to respect the wishes of this area's residents and that is more than I can say about a few certain Council members.

It is my belief that this issue has strengthened our neighborhood and has increased our political awareness. The repercussion of this shall be felt in the next election, for I am not the only one of this opinion.

I respectfully request that the City Council re-evaluate Mr. Youngberg's appointment and renew my faith in the democratic process.

'Freckles' is killed

Lincoln, Neb.

On October 7 at 9:00 a.m., my son was walking to school when he witnessed the deliberate massacre of our pet cat. This incident occurred on North 47th Street between Greenwood and Adams. A blue car driven by a lone man actually left the street at breakneck speed, went up on the curb and struck our black and white cat.

Our family has always tried to live within the confines of the law. Our dogs are never allowed to run loose, our pets are all licensed, vaccinated, well fed, clean, protected, healthy, and deeply loved. Our cat was not in the streets. If he had been, I would still be angry, but not writing this letter.

I wish the person who did this terrible thing would recognize himself. He should have been here when we laid "Freckles" to rest. He should have seen my kids bending down over the little grave. He should have heard my eight-year-old daughter, staring up at me through the rain and her own tears: "Mommy, don't animals have a right to live, too?"

Unfortunately, it is impossible to prosecute an animal-killer. He is not a man nor an animal. I would never insult the animal kingdom by including him in the category.

I know there are lots of nuts running around who get their kicks from killing small animals. It is my fervent desire that perhaps they will see themselves in this letter and refrain from doing any more such killing.

If we had to lose our "Freckles", we hope that his death will help to educate other people and cause pet-killers to take a second look at just exactly what they are.

Neighborhood rights

Lincoln, Neb.

Community Development Task Force member Leo Scherer's latest attacks on neighborhood groups is typical of the attitude of City Council members toward citizen participation. Neighborhood groups are considered fine, unless they are viable and active. If the Council had its way, the only role these groups would play would be having their names only, to be ripped off and put on an application for block grant funds from the federal government.

The Council has acted to undermine these groups since their inception as they have taken up causes in opposition to Council thinking. First attempts were made to block neighborhood requests for their own VISTA workers, then by tightening the pursestrings on citizen participation funds. Even free Xeroxing has been taken away by Urban Development.

Most recently the Council rejected the Clinton neighborhood appointment to the CDD task force. The Council determined that Eric Youngberg did not represent the Clinton neighborhood because he does not share the Council's view on the proposed Northeast Radial which would go through his neighborhood. Neither do many other neighborhood residents; however, the Council would prefer to recognize those who favor the radial as representative of the neighborhood.

If it is up to the Council to decide who is to represent consumer interests on the task force also, there will be no neighborhood representation. I am very concerned about the precedents being set by Council members for it is only a matter of time before they challenge other neighborhood appointments because of their outspokenness. As long as block grant funds are being spent in this community, proper citizen participation should be required and the Council should not decide who represents the neighborhoods or how they should spend their money.

LARRY MOLCZYK

Red tape ties up Columbus and crew

Russell Baker

Columbus waded ashore. "I hereby discover America" he said. An official asked what he thought he was doing. When Columbus told him, the official asked to see his discovery permit.

Columbus had no discovery permit. The official upbraided him for trying to commit discovery without a permit. What would become of society if anybody and everybody were allowed to sail around the world discovering things without a permit? Columbus said he had never thought of it that way.

The next thing you knew, said the official, people would start getting married without permits, and wouldn't that lead to one fine mess! Heaven knew there was already little enough respect for authority.

Columbus went to the out-to-lunch window at the Department of Paperculture, which was charged with the responsibility of crushing the spirit of anybody who wanted a permit. During his third day of waiting in line, he was seized as an illegal alien and turned over to the Bureau of Immigration, which was charged with the responsibility of insulting immigrants.

"All I want is a permit to discover America," Columbus said. They laughed. They had heard that line before. Why didn't Columbus make things easy on himself by confessing? Had he ever gambled, taken drugs, committed adultery? They ended by deporting him as an undesirable discoverer and he was sent back to his ships under orders to discover some place else and leave America alone.

Columbus decided to discover Japan and issued a press release saying so. Before he could sail, he was overwhelmed by journalists with imaginations inflamed by the story of an intrepid Italian navigator setting forth in Spanish ships to discover a fabled land of Kabuki and TV sets.

The journalists foresaw the most over-reportable event since Richard Nixon discovered Mao Tse-tung. Soon hundreds of reporters, photographers, television cameramen, editors, publishers and network executives were demanding space on the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria.

The President acted. Only nine months in office, he had already succeeded in failing to open the out-to-lunch window at the Department of Paperculture, to make the Bureau of Immigration stop asking obscene questions of foreigners and to make the Senate stop giving the furniture to oil tycoons. He needed a big event to take everybody's mind off his nonaccomplishments.

Instead of wasting all those journalists and their junketing bosses on Japan, the President asked, why don't we cash in for some good feeling by having this Italian chap discover America?

In an instant an official boarded the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria with splendid new discovery permits. A White House man came aboard to deliver the discovery script. Columbus would wade ashore smoking a corn-cob pipe and say, "I have discovered," whereupon the President would deliver a welcoming address, shake Columbus's hand and name towns in Ohio, Georgia, Mississippi, Indiana, Texas, Wisconsin and Kansas after him.

Columbus was pleased, but the White House man was not. He had seen ships in such flagrant violation of maritime safety laws that they were scarcely fit to sail Walden Pond, much less to discover America.

He had seen crews that contained scarcely a woman or a black. Would it not be more politic, he asked, for America to be discovered by an equal-opportunity navigator? Columbus balked. It would take months to sail back to Spain, recruit the required percentages of female and black sailors and sail back for the discovery. It was already October. He wanted to get the discovery over with before the arrival of the heating season could bankrupt him with oil bills.

The television networks solved the problem by offering to fly in the necessary crew replacements in return for exclusive rights to the discovery. Under the contract, Columbus agreed to make the discovery in prime time and to pause twice during his wade ashore for two three-minute commercial breaks.

At last all was ready for the discovery. Ninety million Americans at their TV sets watched as Columbus stepped into the water and started his historic wade. They were astonished when they saw the waiting president confer with an excited adviser, who then dashed into the sea and stopped Columbus 50 feet from the beach.

Columbus returned to his ship. The White House announced that the discovery had been postponed. Since the event would ever after be celebrated by a holiday, the President said, it would be best to have it occur on a Monday so Americans would get a three-day holiday weekend.

Columbus was so disgusted that he was about to haul anchor and discover some place sensible, and would have done so if the Justice Department hadn't threatened to indict him for conspiracy to leave America undiscovered. This is why to this day Columbus Day always falls on a Monday.

Clear case of bribery

Ron Hendren

Washington — It is a case where two rights have combined to make a wrong. Right No. 1: The recent congressional pay raise. It was long in coming, deserved by the vast majority of members and served to put Congress on a pay scale competitive with the private sector. Right No. 2: The need to find a way to encourage older members with 20 years and more of service to retire and make way for newer blood.

And now for the wrong: House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, D-Mass., has rushed through a bill providing higher retirement benefits to 20-year-and-up veterans who announce their retirement by the first of next year.

The theory is that since, as a result of the raise, some members stand to qualify for higher pensions if they serve just one more term, let's induce them to quit now by saying, "Look, fellows, you don't have to run again; we'll give you the added benefits without the extra two years of service."

It's a rotten, lousy idea. In the first place, it won't work. Only a handful of members stand to benefit from the legislation, and all of them are at the November stage of life where an extra $3,120 tacked on to a retirement income of $42,880 per year is neither here nor there. I have a strong feeling that members who have determined to quit would not change their plans in the absence of this inducement; and that those who want to stay on would not be moved to retire because of it. There's just no percentage in the deal either way.

In the second place, O'Neill's proposal is an out and out payoff, an effort to buy not just a member's vote, but his seat! If I were one of the people at whom this misguided "generosity" is aimed, I'd be insulted, and not just a little bit.

I can't imagine what O'Neill was thinking. At best he had the welfare of his older colleagues at heart; at worst he was calculating to consolidate his power in the next Congress. Maybe a little bit of both.

But the real mystery is the response of Congress and public interest groups so far. The bill got through the House without hearings, without debate, without a roll call vote, and without so much as a whimper even from fiscal conservatives. And Common Cause, the "people's lobby," is backing it. "A clear trade," Common Cause president David Cohen called it, "to get people out."

Indeed. A clear bribe would be nearer the mark. And not a very good one at that. The bill is now before the Senate government operations committee, where it should be allowed to remain in permanent and terminal obscurity.

Physics, chemistry Nobels given

Stockholm, Sweden (AP) — A 78-year-old American known as the "father of modern magnetism" and his former student at Harvard shared the Nobel prize for physics Tuesday with a Briton. A Russian-born Belgian was awarded the prize for chemistry.

The Swedish Academy gave 1977 Nobel awards to John H. Van Vleck, 78, of Harvard University, Philip W. Anderson, 55, of Princeton University and Bell Laboratories, Sir Nevill F. Mott, 72, of England's Cavendish Laboratory, and Ilya Prigogine, 60, of the Free University of Brussels.

The physicists, who will divide a $145,000 prize, were cited for research on the electronic structure of magnetic and "disordered" systems — work already applied to development of the laser, new industrial uses of glass and copper spirals for birth control devices.

Prigogine won the $145,000 chemistry prize for expanding thermodynamic theory — which deals with transforming heat into energy — to explain how order can exist within seemingly disordered environmental systems. An academy member said the Belgian's research could have a bearing on the development of solar energy.

The academy continued a trend of awarding the physics prize to two or more researchers and the chemistry prize to an individual. Last year's chemistry winner was William S. Lipscomb of Harvard Univeristy.

Van Vleck and Anderson were the 43rd and 44th Americans to win the physics prize, shared last year by Burton Richter and Samuel Ting when Americans swept all five Nobels given.

Van Vleck, who is Hollis professor emeritus of mathematics and natural philosophy at Harvard, said in Cambridge that the award was a "complete surprise. So often prizes go to younger men. Anybody couldn't help feeling that it is a culmination when you're 78 years old."

Van Vleck began the work that led to the prize in 1927, only a year after the theory of quantum mechanics was stated. This theory, he said, enabled him to determine "why certain materials are magnetic and why they have the properties they do."

The academy said Van Vleck was the first to point out the importance of electron correlation — the interaction between the motions of the electrons.

As Van Vleck's student at Harvard in the 1940s, it said, Anderson developed this concept to explain how magnetic "moments" can occur in metals like copper and silver, which in pure form are not magnetic.

Anderson, a consulting director at Bell Labs and a Princeton professor, said at his home in New Vernon, N.J., that it was a privilege to share the Nobel with two "already great historical figures."

Prigogine Mott Van Vleck Anderson

He said the work he did for the prize was finished 20 years ago and dealt with "fundamentals behind a lot of the things people are doing now."

The academy said Mott and Anderson worked separately to contribute to knowledge about disordered systems. These systems exist within "non-crystallic" materials, which have irregular atomic structures — a quality making it hard to treat them theoretically.

The three physicists' work has quickly led to technical advances.

"As an example," the academy said, "one can mention that Van Vleck's ideas have played a central role for the development of the laser, whereas the technical development of amorphous materials like glass, which is now going on, would be unthinkable without Mott's and Anderson's contributions."

Mott, celebrating over beer at a restaurant in Marburg, West Germany, said, "This is a great honor because you are not just awarded by a committee in Stockholm — it is the result of the considered opinion of scientists all over the world who say you are worth it."

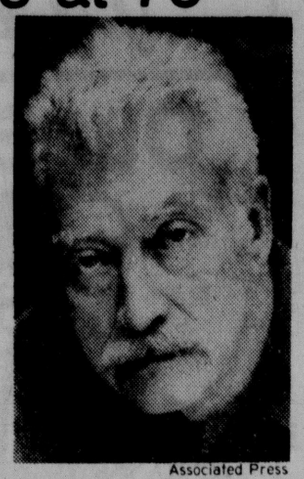

Mott retired as Cavendish professor of Experimental Physics at Cambridge University in 1971 but continued research at Cavendish Labs, where his father and mother were research students.

The academy deliberated 45 minutes before announcing the chemistry prize.

"The great contribution of Prigogine to thermodynamic theory," the academy said, "is his successful extension of it to systems which are far from thermodynamic equilibrium . . . . He has demonstrated that a new form of ordered structures can exist under such conditions and has given them the name 'dissipative structures' to stress that they only exist in conjunction with their environment."

American novelist Kantor dies at 73

Sarasota, Fla. (AP) — MacKinlay Kantor, one of America's foremost novelists, died Tuesday after a long bout with a heart ailment. He was 73.

Associated Press

MacKinlay Kantor . . . author.

Kantor received worldwide acclaim and a Pulitzer Prize for "Andersonville," a 1956 novel about a Civil War prison camp. Two decades later, he received the Freedom Foundation award for "Valley Forge," a historical novel of the American Revolution.

He was a prolific writer, with 32 novels and hundreds of short stories, poems, essays and articles to his credit. His magazine reports of the air war in Europe have been cited as classics in war correspondence.

At various times he worked for all the major film studios in Hollywood. His poem, "Glory for Me," became the Oscar-winning film, "The Best Years of Our Lives." Disney's "Follow Me, Boys" was based on Kantor's "God and My Country."

At 17, before he finished high school, Kantor went to work as a reporter for his hometown newspaper, the Webster City, Iowa, Daily News. He sold his first short story that year, then spent the next 5½ years trying to sell another.

Kantor had never attended college, but he received honorary doctorates from Drake University, Lincoln (Ill.) College and Ripon College, among others.

Since 1936 he lived in a large rambling house overlooking the Gulf of Mexico.

Surviving are his widow, Irene Layne Kantor; a daughter, Layne Kantor Shroder; a son, Tim Kantor, all of Sarasota; a sister, Virginia Sours of Fort Lauderdale and six grandchildren.

Ex-Lincolnite has a lot of screenwriting credits

Of the 270 MH2 episodes, Eyen has helped write 140.

Staff photo by Frank Varga

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

By 11 p.m., every Monday through Friday, another episode of Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman has ended.

That's when it's time for the credits, the time most run to the television and probe the channel selector.

Except, perhaps for Lincoln dentist Dr. Michael Eyen. He can watch the credits and see a name he recognizes.

His nephew, Tom Eyen, is one of the writers of that series.

The Eyens recently held a family reunion in Cambridge, Ohio. From there, Tom Eyen called The Star.

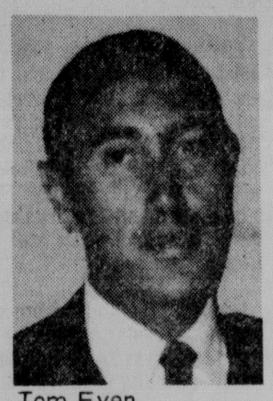

Tom Eyen left Lincoln about 20 years ago, when he was 15 years old. He and his mother had lived here for about five years.

He doesn't get back to Lincoln for visits, what with two careers, on two coasts, to manage.

First, he has his work in Los Angeles. After completing MH2, he is working on a script for a movie that will begin filming this spring. He is also writing the pilot for a television series.

Then, there are his New York productions. "Women Behind Bars," which ran for three years, recently opened in London.

Eyen said he first moved to New York in the early '60s. He graduated from the American Academy of Dramatic Arts there.

Tom Eyen
. . . a busy writer.

Eyen had studied to be an actor, but he was not serious about it. Acting was a means to an end, a way to learn about playwriting.

"I used to think you had to be 40 to be a writer," he said.

Eyen's first play appeared long before his 40th birthday. He began writing for the LaMama Experimental Theater in New York City. His first play was named "Frustrata."

His output gained momentum — about five plays a year. Experimental theater required that pace, Eyen said. Each play ran for two weeks.

Eyen credits himself with discovering Bette Midler. She had the starring role in "Miss Nefertiti Regrets," which was produced in 1965.

Eyen now writes plays at a more deliberate pace — about one a year.

"The Dirtiest Show in Town," which opened in the early '70s, took him from the LaMama Theater to off-Broadway productions.

Eyen also wrote two other shows during the 70s that were produced off-Broadway: "Hannah Skirts" and "Women Behind Bars."

"Women Behind Bars" depicts a women's penitentiary in the 1950s. It is "a satirical take-off on prison movies," Eyen said. The cast has 10 women. This year one of them was Fanne Fox.

Eyen said he never saw Ms. Fox's performance. "But I heard that people who saw her performance were stunned." He said she was a better actress than people had thought possible.

Maybe because it was a role that fit the personality of the actress, he said, Ms. Fox played a "crazy Puerto Rican" trapped in the jail.

In 1976, Eyen moved to California to work on Mary Hartman. He came to Fernwood right when Mary was cracking up.

Working with Norman Lear, the show's creator, was a "very, very informative experience." Eyen said he wrote one show a week himself.

That was like writing one play a week, each a half-hour in length with 30 pages of dialogue.

"I had been told that it would be very hard," Eyen said. But after 10 years of the experimental theater pace, MH2 was not that strenuous, he said.

MH2 was a bridge in his career, Eyen said. Before that series, he described his style as "outrageous, totally unrealistic."

MH2 was a middle ground, he said — half real, half unreal.

Now, he is growing into projects that are a "totally new style."

He is under contract with NBC-TV to write a pilot for a series, tentatively called "Hometown." It's going to be written in a "naturalistic" style, he said.

Besides that, the only thing he knows about his series is that it will depict life in a small town. He has been researching that series in Georgia.

He is also writing a movie script. He has been visiting Marietta, Ohio, for background information. The movie, tentatively titled "Holy High," will depict a Catholic high school in the early '60s.

Eyen said he has never lacked for story ideas, although he might in the future. When you're young, you have more inspiration. When you age, it's harder to dream up new ideas.

"You keep cashing in on your past inspirations," he said.

Witch doctors' fees run as high as $60

(c) Chicago Daily News

Johannesburg — What does a South African housewife do when her husband starts attending bogus business meetings or when his passions toward her start to cool? The answer for many white South African women is to call in the local black witch doctor.

There are hundreds of witch doctors in the ghettos surrounding South African cities. And witch doctors, for a fee, plus transportation costs, are willing to make house calls in white suburbs.

Calls have become frequent enough that the witch doctors, taking a tip from their white medical colleagues, have standardized their fees.

A consultation, which includes fortune telling, some prayers and a good luck spell cast on the house runs $15. Getting rid of a bad spirit runs close to $45.

Keeping a husband faithful jacks the price up close to $60 and, for a price, some additional love potions, virility medicine and good luck charms can be thrown in.

For the same fee, a package deal is available offering health, wealth and spiritual salvation. Easy credit terms are available. For blacks, the credit rate is $2 a month. Witch doctors say they have no defaulters . . . when asked why, they just smile knowingly.

Constance Ndlovna, a Soweto witch doctor, used to work in a plastic factory until she was paralyzed on one side. Doctors could not mend her. She said that after three months in bed, she heard the voice of her ancestors, who told her to go to a witch doctor hundreds of miles away.

When she arrived at the witch doctor's home, he was waiting for her. The witch doctor, called Ntana, cured her paralysis and trained her in the healing arts, especially in herbs, their use and identification.

Ndlovna was raised a good Christian. Like many others, she has merged that faith and her ancestoral religion into one.

Sympathetic magic plays a goodly part in Constance Ndlovna's art. But so do herbs. While many have no healing power at all, others do. African witch doctors used quinine to help malaria victims long before white men knew what malaria or quinine were.

African herbs' effective powers have finally aroused the curiosity of the South African medical world. The University of Witwatersrand, one of the country's best medical facilities, has begun in depth research into the use of herbs by witch doctors.

Opening lead - king of clubs.

When you're declarer in a slam, it is surely right to give the play somewhat more careful consideration than if you were in a part score or game contract. South neglected to do that in the present case and it ultimately cost him 1,530 points.

He won the club lead with the ace and played the A-K of diamonds, planning to ruff the third round of diamonds high in dummy. Unfortunately, East ruffed the king of diamonds, returned a trump, and South later had to lose a diamond trick to go down one.

The deal illustrates the type of reasoning required when a contract that seems easy to play and make actually contains an element of danger. In these so-called "laydown" hands, declarer should stop and ask himself: "What can defeat me?" Had South followed that rule in this case, he might have found the right way to play the slam. A 5-1 diamond division is certainly not probable — but, since it is possible, some effort should be made to guard against it.

After winning the club lead and cashing the ace of diamonds, South should have played the deuce of diamonds at trick three! This would have provided him with total protection against any division of the diamonds, whether they were split 3-3, 4-2 or 5-1. In the third and critical case, South would be able to ruff the next diamond high in dummy, discard the ten of diamonds on the ace of spades, and thus insure twelve tricks.

Let's grant that South was unlucky to run into a 5-1 diamond break that cost him the slam. But, even so, the most it could have cost him to play a low diamond at trick three was 30 points, while the failure to do so could, and in fact did, cost him 1,530 points.

Bus ad: 'Take me, I'm yours'

Detroit (AP) — Remember the airline ads with stewardesses proclaiming "I'm so-and-so. Fly me?"

Well, the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority liked them and now has one saying, "Take me, I'm yours."

Ads for buses serving Detroit suburbs will carry the slogan under a cartoon of a bus, the authority's board decided Tuesday.

But there's a difference: when the board considered one ad of a female with half-closed eyes and long lashes, board memberd demeurred, concluding that the concept was one that could be criticized as "sexist."

Instead, there will be a face with no gender.

'All Things Wise and Wonderful' lives up to title

Book Review

By Nancy Waller
Star Staff Writer

On the laps of children lies Benny — a beautiful collie, eyes staring lifelessly ahead, tongue lolling, body limp. As the children wail, veterinary surgeon James Herriot tries to remove a ball lodged in the dog's windpipe.

Every second is precious — the dog must breathe again soon. Pressure applied to the throat forces the ball out, but there is no sign of life. Working like a demon, Herriot blows his own breath into the lifeless form while pressing the rib cage. Suddenly, a faint heart flutter brings a cry from the vet: "His heart's still beating. He's not gone yet!"

Benny's breathing becomes deeper and more regular as Herriot watches the dog return from the dead. The children's wails turn to shouts of joy as the dog miraculously staggers to his feet.

"Benny . . . Benny . . . Benny," the children murmur.

This and other heart-warming stories fill the pages of James Herriot's latest best-seller "All Things Wise and Wonderful." His first effort "All Things Bright and Beautiful" became a world best seller, followed by "All Creatures Great and Small."

His latest effort begins in the early days of World War II when the young vet is inducted into the Royal Air Force.

Between tales of his flight training, Herriot takes the reader back to Yorkshire for a visit with the animals and people of rural England.

As a young, struggling vet, Herriot's world is one of extremes. He encounters a wide range of personalities from stubborn, crusty farmers to a warm, understanding wife. He attends scores of animal births, but manages to miss his own son's.

The reader leaves Herriot's cozy fireside to romp through a pig pen after an uncooperative sow, suffers with Herriot as he attends breach births, winces as his shins are scraped by flying hooves and feels the flush of embarrassment as a farmer bests the young vet with an ancient English treatment.

Herriot suffers these indignities for the love of his practice and the astounding weekly income of $20.

More often than not, his only payment is the sight of a restored limb, or a twinkle in a dog's eye where once only pain was present.

It would be easy to say this book is another collection of warm, funny animal stories. It is. But there is so much more. Without actually making a point of it, Herriot testifies to the powerful link that exists between man and beast.

For some strange reason, humans draw a distinction between "man" and "animal." Herriot is not so presumptuous, for he has witnessed too many times the uncanny similarities.

Herriot says what animal lovers everywhere know: that animals can grieve, experience frustration, know hate and cherish and comprehend trust.

A dying cat uses her last energies to take her kitten to the one human she trusts.

An aged bulldog almost grieves itself to death when his young pup companion dies, but revives when a new pup is introduced.

An old cow, sold for slaughter, defies the butcher and walks home to live out her days in her master's barn.

"All Things Wise and Wonderful" in itself is good medicine. It restores faith in love and kindness and confirms the animal lover's observations.

Skeptics will think "cornball" or "soap opera." But all readers will marvel at Herriot's perception and senstivity. An injured mongrel to Herriot is a person: a hobo down in his luck. An old, worn-out horse in Herriot's eyes is a venerable being whose value is not diminished by age.

If you have earned an animal's love and trust, you'll find "All Things Wise and Wonderful" a satisfying respite from a cynical world.

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — If property taxes are killing you, there may be a way to reduce the bill. Some homeowners are overtaxed in relation to their neighbors, which is unfair. Others are victims of assessment error — their homes are listed at the tax offices as being larger or more valuable than they really are. If you can show that either of these situations applies to you, you have a good shot at getting your assessment lowered.

Only a small fraction of homeowners ever challenge their assessments. But it appears that of those that do, a high percentage comes out winners.

Richard Almy, director of research and technical services for the International Association of Assessing Officers, says that property-tax objections are most often brought by the upper-middle classes. "Those people are savvy about the tax system, and quick to spot an assessment that may be unfair," he says. "But the lower and middle classes aren't as aware." Hence, they're more likely to be overtaxed.

Another group of people apt to be overtaxed are those who buy newly built homes. Those assessments are based on current market values, while older homes in the neighborhood may not have had their assessments brought up to date for years. Assessors may argue that your new home assessment is fair, because it's based on accurate property values. But that's not the right way to look at it. Equity requires that all houses be taxed alike. If other homes are recorded at less than market value, new homes should be, too.

Every city and town has a system for appealing property taxes. When you get a new assessment, the notice should state the date and time when appeals will be heard. Or, call the town hall and ask. Normally, appeals are heard only once a year, so if you miss the date you'll have a 12-month wait.

Many appeals boards meet at night, so you don't have to lose time from work. No lawyer is necessary. You simply go before a board of your fellow citizens and state your case. All boards are different — some have to be triple-convinced, others give token tax-cuts to most of the people who come before them. But in general, the process is fair.

Should the decision go against you, you can appeal further. If the case is strong and the potential tax savings large, you may want to hire a lawyer and go to court. Sometimes an entire neighborhood is overassessed in relation to similar neighborhoods, in which case the lawyer's fee could be split among a group of homeowners.

In many communities, property appraisals are not done by local assessors, but by outside firms. Appeals boards may put complaints off by saying that the appraisal is out of their hands. That's an answer you shouldn't accept. The town is responsible for the fairness and accuracy of all the work done.

There are four common grounds for appealing an assessment:

(1) The assessor made a mistake —either in his description of your property or in the market value he assigned it.

(2) A new addition to your home was assessed at cost rather than on the basis of its contribution to your home's value. For example, if you paid $8,000 for a new room but it added only $5,000 to current market value, the basis of your assessment should be raised only $5,000.

(3) People with similar homes in the same neighborhood pay lower taxes than you do. Information on other people's assessment is available in your town office, and open to the public.

(4) Your assessment represents a higher percentage of market value than the assessments of other houses in town.

You might also ask the assessor's office whether you're entitled to any special tax breaks under the law. These are sometimes granted to veterans, older people, and low-income people.

The best you can do with assessments, however, is to share the tax burden fairly. Says Almy, "The only way to prevent general increases in tax levies is to pay closer attention to how school boards, town government, and county commissioners spend your money."

Wives have opposite complaint

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 40, and have been married for 20 years. For some unknown reason my husband has lost all interest in sex. I told him in a very nice way that I missed his loving, and he just laughed and said, "Oh come on, we're both too old for that kind of stuff!" (He's 42.) We get along fine, but it's like living with my brother.

He always come right home after work and never goes anywhere without me, so I'm sure there's no other woman.

I can't understand his indifference. I keep myself neat and clean and I never nag him.

Our four children will all be gone and on their own soon, and if this is any sample of what my life will be like when they're gone, it won't be worth living. Sign me . . .

UNDERLOVED

DEAR UNDER: Please read the following letter:

DEAR ABBY: How do you convince your husband that you still love him, but you aren't as young as you used to be — if you get what I mean?

After 20 years and five children, shouldn't there be more to marriage than sex? If I don't feel like making love every night, he pouts and says I don't "love" him anymore.

Am I abnormal or is he? I always thought a man got less passionate after 40. Mine is unbelievable.

Please help me, Abby. I do love him, but I think he is expecting too much from a 40-year-old woman.

PAID MY DUES

DEAR UNDERLOVED AND PAID MY DUES: I don't know what's 'normal" and neither does anyone else. Each person has his own emotional temperature, and what is "normal" for one could break someone else's thermometer.

Both of you should insist that your husbands be examined by physicians to rule out the possibility of physical deficienceis.

Then I suggest you consider seeing a qualified sex therapist. (If your physician can't recommend one, inquire at the Medical Department of your nearest university.)

Pity PAID MY DUES isn't married to UNDERLOVED'S husband and vice versa. But that's just another of life's inequities.

DEAR ABBY: Never in my wildest dreams did I think I'd be writing to Dear Abby, but I have a problem I heard you might be able to help me with.

I am a middle-aged woman whose problem seems to get worse with age. I love to wear pantsuits, but I have practically no rear, so consequently all my pants are baggy in the seat.

Gaining weight is not the answer. I never gain there. I heard that you once mentioned a place that sold false fannies. If that's true, where is it?

FLAT IN BACK

DEAR FLAT: Never in my wildest dreams did I think I'd be plugging Frederick's of Hollywood, but that's the place. If you write to them, perhaps they'll send you a catalogue.

San Francisco — "It takes a heap o' livin' to make a house a home." "There is nothing like rinsing with vinegar to clean bathroom tile." I keep house with the aid of two teen-agers. A dachshund, two cats and a book called "Household Hints."

When it rains — (if it ever rains again) — the first rain comes Saturday night. Then we put saucepans where it's leaking through the roof. Wait for Monday and the repairman.

"Household Hints" are letters from ladies. Veterans of every home disaster known since we moved out of caves.

A lady writes: "I did not realize rubber mats in bathtubs are not skidproof until my husband slipped etc."

A lot of ladies — (presumably with dented husbands) — wrote in. Gave recipes on how to make rubber bathmats stick to the bottom of the tub. "Use cornstarch."

Nobody wrote how to replace the husband in case he was no longer useable. If you are going to have rubber bathmats, get down a policy with the insurance company.

Then if the mat (and husband) go whoops! — well, you will be a well-dressed widow. And probably enough more to have the bathroom completely done over with a non-skid shower.

Golden days of autumn now. We got a wax buildup on the kitchen floor. I nearly murdered myself when my feet went out from under me. Like I was walking on a cake of ice.

Now I take off my shoes. Go in my bare feet. Better I send a child.

"Go in the kitchen and fetch me the cooking sherry."

Kids are sure-footed as goats. And they don't have so far to fall. If they do slip, it's education. Let them learn like I did.

I run a taut but happy ship. "You do the dishes tonight. And you set the table." I let them split it. Even Steven.

The "household Hints" book says: "I like to do the crossword puzzle after my husband goes to work. I had trouble keeping sharp pencils. Now I keep a fruit jar full of pencils. In the bottom of it, I dropped a 10-cent store pencil sharpener . . ."

There is a woman who is all brain.

I filled a glass jar with pencils. I put a 10-cent store sharpener in it. I put it on the table where they do their homework.

Household Hint: "If you take the razor blade out of your Dad's razor to sharpen your pencils, be sure to wipe the pencil shavings off the blade before you put it back.

"Otherwise he finds out and screams and hollers. He might even ground you."

☆ ☆ ☆

I did get some help. A splendid girl comes in three times a week. A whirlwind around the scatter. The kind that puts overn cleaner in the oven.

Puts white and colored clothing through the washing machine separately. On the side she reads my horoscope.

'Mercury is coming trine Juptier. That's good!"

☆ ☆ ☆

Some days her aspects are off. The children come from school. I said: "She couldn't come today. She has a bad condition of Mars in Saturn. You'll have to put away the dishes yourself."

Crash! I said: "It's the last glass. We'll have to drink out of coffee cups."

There are no hints in "Houshold Hints" for stress. Run down to the corner and order a pizza to go. Survive, that's the hint for today.

Miguel came for the work

By James T. Sterba
(c) New York Times

Del Rio, Texas — Miguel decided to come to the United States barefooted. Wearing shoes was not part of his American dream. In school, they hurt his feet. He could run faster without them. Tattered blue jeans, a belt, a shirt, and a prized baseball cap were all he needed. For a small Mexican boy, plotting his first cross-border adventure, shoes have a low priority.

Three days after he made up his mind, U.S. Border Patrol agents caught him in an asparagus field near Carrizo Springs, 44 miles into Texas from where he crossed. He stood about four feet, six inches tall and weighed less than 80 pounds. He told the agents he was 15 years old. They didn't believe him. They said he looked more like 10.

For Mexican boys who live along the border, sneaking into the U.S. has always been almost a mandatory part of growing up. It's easy and adventurous, like smoking, drinking or swiping candy is for American boys. In recent years, however, many more of them have been doing it out of necessity. With the Mexican economy depressed, their families need money for essentials. And getting it is much easier a few hundred yards into the United States.

Many Mexican youths, especially just south of California, sneak across to shoplift, mug, and rob to get money. Along the 205-mile-long Del Rio sector, cross-border crime isn't much of a problem. The small-town Mexican boys here, say Border Patrol agents, come across mostly to work. Last year, the agents apprehended 32,034 illegal migrants in this sector. Perhaps one-third of them were teen-age boys.

Pay for the most menial jobs in the U.S. seems like a bonanza to teen-agers who cannot find work at all back home. Some 750,000 young Mexicans enter the job market each year, but with 40 per cent of that country's work force underemployed or unemployed, their chances of finding a job are bleak. Pay is often the equivalent of a dollar or two per day.

Miguel knew from his older friends about the big money available across the border, and the plentiful jobs when fruits and vegetables need picking. He also knew, however, that the Rio Grande was high, wide and flowing fast this time of year. Wading or swimming across is dangerous. So early one morning, he and some older boys gathered near the railroad bridge that connects Piedras Negas with Eagle Pass, 56 miles south of Del Rio.

Hugh E. Williams, the chief patrol agent for the Del Rio Sector, has 191 agents to cover 205 miles of border. They work three shifts. With vacations and leaves, only about 50 agents are on duty at any given time. Someone usually watches the railroad bridge, but not constantly. It was during one of the lapses that Miguel scampered across.

He followed some of the older boys to see a Mexican-American man who lives in Eagle Pass and makes a living finding field workers for area farmers. He is a labor contractor who is paid to round up and deliver by truck field hands. Shortly after daylight, Miguel was riding in the back of a truck toward Carrizo Springs.

An hour or two later, he was in a field picking asparagus. He worked until sundown and was paid $11. That night, he and several others slept in an old shack near the field.

The next day, Miguel's hands were sore, but he knew that the more asparagus he picked, the more money he would make. So he tried to work fast. His reward at the end of the day: $18. He slept on the dirt floor in the shack again.

Next morning, shortly after he had begun to pick asparagus again, some men who looked like police — they wore green Border Patrol uniforms and carried pistols — came to the field and started asking the workers for identification: proof of U.S. citizenship or a "green card" that allows Mexicans to cross the border to work. Miguel and four of the other field workers had none.

Since it is not illegal for farmers to hire illegal aliens, no one had previously asked Miguel if he was a U.S. resident. Asking such questions is not the best way to get needed laborers during a harvest.

Miguel and the four others were led out of the field and into the back of a green Border Patrol van.

At Carrizo Springs, they were taken into an office where another unifrmed man asked each of them some questions and filled out a card. Miguel readily admitted he came from across the border. And when the man asked if he would like to be voluntarily returned to Mexico, Miguel said yes, enthusiastically.

In the early afternoon, Miguel was taken in the van to the sector headquarters in Del Rio and put in a locked and dimly lit "holding room" with several others. Two hours later, Williams and Gilbert Lee, the agent in charge of the Del Rio subsection, asked him a few questions in Spanish.

Miguel, his hands tucked under his legs, rocked back and forth in a chair nervously. He said he had seven brothers and sisters. He said his father had three part-time jobs in Piedras Negas, as a security guard, a janitor, and a "worker" for another man.

"I think every one of my agents sympathizes with these people," said Lee. "They know that if they were living on the other side in those conditions, they'd be coming across too."

Williams asked to see the money Miguel had earned. The $25 was as much as Miguel's father made all week.

Lipizzaners to visit London

Vienna, Austria (UPI) — Austria's famous dancing white Lipizzan horses, Vienna's top tourist attraction, will travel to London for a series of performances this fall, government officials announced.

Tourists wanting to see them in Vienna during the autumn season are requested to submit their ticket requests well in advance because the trip to London reduces the number of performances here, they said.

Automobile heralded as dining facilitator

Would you believe the automobile as a meal preparation appliance?

That's what a supermarket industry magazine calls cars because they carry people to places where other hands "will do the marketing, the cooking, the serving and the cleaning up."

Robert Dietrich writes in two recent issues of "Progressive Grocer" that:

"Over a two-week period, the average American shows the following predisposition to belly up to a dining table (or counter) other than his own:

"Two-thirds eat at least one meal out (73% of men compared to 63% of women.)

"A substantial one-fifth eat out five or more times."

Dietrich found 65% eating in regular restaurants, 55% in fast-food outlets, 13% at their places of work and 12% at other, unspecified places.

His statistics are from an exclusive nationwide survey of more than 6,500 men and women. It was made by Trendex in cooperation with the magazine.

Grocers who see fast-food operators as major threats to their business are only partly right, the study showed.

" . . . For every two meals eaten out at a fast-food outlet, three are claimed by regular restaurants.

"The real alternative to eating at home will, increasingly, be sit-down restaurants," the study indicated.

The main reasons: household income and education.

People below the $20,000 a year level eat fewer than three meals a week away from home. Even for them, restaurant meals are about 30% more frequent than the fast-food variety.

Above that level, "the taste for glass, silver and linen instead of paper, plastic and formica holds sway."

Diners' out start to kick the burger habit at about 25 years of age, but their loyalty to other purveyors of food away from home remains stably close to 1.3 meals a week over several decades.

Restaurant meals have their greatest appeal to 45- to 54-year-olds, who have the money to support the habit.

The drop-off in meals eaten out occurs after that age not so much from choice as from limited income, the survey suggests; eating often in all types of restaurants decreases after 54.

Trooper is believer in vest now

Fort Lauderdale, Fla. (UPI) — Robert Wargin was given a nylon bullet-proof vest by his wife when he became a state trooper and wore it only at her insistence. One night last week it saved his life.

"I will wear it religiously from now on," the 25-year-old trooper said from his wheelchair the next day.

Wargin was shot in the wrist and stomach in a gunbattle with a man accused of abducting and raping a 12-year-old Miami girl. After being wounded, he chased the man at speeds of up to 100 miles an hour and captured him with the help of other officers.

Eugene Garton Adams, 37, was charged with abduction, false imprisonment, involuntary sexual battery, aggravated battery and attempted murder. He was held without bond at the Broward County jail.

Wargin said one bullet, fired from a distance of 25 feet, "felt like somebody knocked the wind out of me. The vest stopped the slug, but the impace caused a large surface bruise on my abdomen."

He was taken to a hospital for observation.

Wargin's wife, Janet, bought the vest as a present when he graduated from the Florida Highway Patrol Academy in 1974. She said they clashed often on whether he would wear the $75 nylon vest.

"He thought it was uncomfortable in the heat," she said. She began holding "inspections at the door" every day to make sure he wore it. "A few times, he was marched back into the house to put it on," she said.

Wargin said he had been wearing the vest more frequently since Trooper Bradley S. Glascock was gunned down near a toll booth on a Miami expressway in August.

"It saved his life. I don't think there is any doubt about that," said highway patrol chief Col. Eldrige Beach.

The girl, abducted in downton Miami, was treated and then released to her family.

Don't alter form to register dog

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, Neb. 68501.

Doggone problem

I have written several times to the American Kennel Club in an effort to register my dog. Each time I send them a form, it is returned with the items checked that need correction. Can you contact them and see if you can get us communicating again?

Keith Bastron
Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A spokesman for the American Kennel Club said your registration problem probably occurred because you crossed out the name of the co-owner on your application form. At the top of the application it clearly states corrections and erasures are not permitted. American Kennel is sending you a supplemental registration form and a booklet explaining how to complete it. The fee is $5. If you have additional problems completing the form, the club suggests you contact a local animal breeder or dog club familiar with the paperwork. Good luck.

Anyone have a match?

My husband gave me a Keepsake diamond ring in the zane style. Later we found that the matching wedding band and diamond ring did not fit together properly. We called Keepsake directly and they suggested we contact one of their local dealers for help. A Keepsake dealer, the House of Time in Omaha, sent the rings to the company for us but the company returned them and said the band was the correct style to fit the engagement ring. They do not fit together, though, and we think something should be done.

J. S.
Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A House of Time spokesman confirmed that the rings were returned to the company for inspection. As you reported, the company checked the rings and determined they were a proper set. However, if you are still unsatisfied with the report, she suggests you contact the firm that originally sold you the rings. Your guarantee may allow you to trade for a different ring set if the problem is with the ring design. If you need assistance, we will be glad to help you contact the original dealer. Keep us posted.

Given the boot

Is there any way to find out how to contact one of the shoe vendors at the recent Nebraska State Fair. I am looking for the folks in the wagon that sold clogs and boots.

Peg H.
Lincoln

ACTION LINE: You bet your boots, Peg. State Fair Manager Henry Brandt suggests you write the State Fairgrounds office, describing the location of the booth, the type of merchandise sold, and any other details you recall. They will attempt to locate the vendor's address for you.

ACTION LINE UPDATE: Several magazine subscription problems have arrived recently. M. S., Martell, should receive a one-year extension of her Time subscription. A handful of problems with TV Radio Mirror have been forwarded to the firm's New York office for action. S. S., Hickman, should be receiving her Volleyball Magazine again, with credit for the next year.

U.S. tourists set Europe flight record

New York (UPI) — A 4-year-old record was beaten when 523,243 U.S. citizens flew to Europe in July 1977, according to the U.S. Immigration Service. Another record was set when 43% — or 222,210 — traveled on charter flights.

All the major European destinations showed increases for July, with the statistics showing Britain as the most popular first destination for the charter travelers.

Woman is depressed despite happy, active life

To Your Good Health

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Gland malfunction and chemical imbalance are thought to cause many physical illnesses. Could they also cause unexplained emotional depression? I am long past menopause. Now I find I am deeply depressed. I break into tears at the slightest frustration. This may last from 12 to 48 hours. Annual physicals show I'm in general good health. I do not smoke, drink, or use drugs. I am not on any medication. I'm into outside activities — golf, bowling, volunteer work, the church, etc. Reminding myself that I have everything I could want — family harmony, no financial worries, good health — does nothing to relieve the doldrums. I guess I'm seeking a physical cause for an unexplainable problem. — Mrs. J. B.

Your fatigue could be an important clue. Have you mentioned this, plus your general depression to your physician during those physical examinations? He would want to look for such problems as thyroid underfunction or blood chemistry imbalance.

However, it doesn't take much reading between the lines of your letter to suspect a different cause. Call it "situational" depression. You say that you have financial security, good family relationships. The ship is, so to speak, on an even keel. But it may seem to be drifting.

Women are more prone to such depression than men, by a 30% margin. Are you experiencing the "empty nest" syndrome, a phrase I don't believe needs any explanation? Your outside activity may expend your time and energy, but probably is not providing the day-to-day rewards you formerly got from being the needed full time mother and wife. Perhaps now is the time to begin planning for the future rather than longing for the past.

In a recent discussion on how to overcome middle-aged depression, the term "self-renewal" was used. This might apply to you. Many doctors are trained these days to understand depression as a vital part of a person's total health, part of the trend toward treating the "whole person." The state of mind can be reflected in the state of the body.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been bothered by constant dizziness. I have been told it is caused by an infection in the inner ear. Is there any medication or anything that can be done to ease this condition? — H. G.

Who told you have an inner ear infection. I doubt it was a doctor, because if there was an infection there, his goal would be to clear it up, and that usually requires antibiotics. There are many non-infection causes of dizziness, and I suggest you find out just what is causing yours.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know what causes the lines etched around the mouth, especially between the nose and upper lip. Is it the lack of something? — Mrs. M. C. F.

These are called "naso-labial folds" — deep grooves from the outer edges of the nostrils to the corners of the mouth. With age the skin there loses some of its elasticity. These folds may also occur after considerable weight loss.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Health Tip

Medical identification can be important any time someone attempts to aid a person who suffers an injury or sudden illness, according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

With the aid of a medical identification card and a signal device bearing the universal symbol of medical identification, a person can learn immediately that the safety of the injured or sick person depends on doing or not doing certain specific things.

A universal symbol designed by the American Medical Association is used by national health organizations to aid first-aiders in learning whether the victim has a special medical problem such as diabetes, epilepsy or another medical problem which requires special medical attention.

School population shift eyed

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

As school enrollment goes down and shifts to newer areas of the city, the Lincoln Board of Education will have to make delicate decisions involving building new schools and closing existing schools.

Board members began looking into the school use issue during its Tuesday morning board meeting.

Enrollment has steadily declined in Lincoln public schools over the past seven years, while at the same time the areas where school-age children live has shifted outward toward the city's edge.

This shift means two new elementary school buildings probably will be needed within the next five years, said Supt. John Prasch. The probable locations would be the Thomas sits south of Hwy. 2 and between 27th and 40th Sts. and the Cate site north of Superior between 27th and 10th Sts.

A tentative building summary, prepared by the administration, also shows some initial consideration to the possible closing of five elementary schools — Bethany, Hartley, Havelock, Hawthorne and Saratoga — plus the Hayward Center.

But final decisions hinge on an as yet undetermined policy balancing the cost of increasing busing with the cost of keeping smaller schools open, said Prasch.

One-fourth of the elementary children go to schools somewhere other than where their counterparts went ten years ago, said Prasch, explaining where Lincoln's school growth isn't.

Enrollment at the centrally located, older schools declined from 32% of the total 1967 elementary population to 24% this year. These schools are Clinton, Hartley, Prescott, Park, Saratoga, Hawthorne, Randolph and Sheridan.

Enrollment at schools north of O St. and east of 27th St. declined from 37% of the 1967 elementary school population to 28% this year, Prasch said.

The best size for efficient staffing of elementary schools, according to Lincoln's facility policy, is around 500 to 600 students in six grades.

Currently only eight of the 34 elementary schools have enrollments larger than 500 students.

To keep school building figures that large "will mean committing ourselves to a permanent kind of busing," Prasch said.

"There aren't that number of children within a 1¼ mile area to fill a school except for Zeman and Hill and that may change as the neighborhood matures," said Prasch.

Current district policy provides busing for any elementary students who live more than 1¼ mile from school.

Busing currently costs about $100 a year for each child. Board member Milan Wall asked that the cost in time a child might spent on a bus over a year also be considered.

However, a move to smaller schools means spending more money. The smaller schools still need staff to provide the opportunities parents are used to having for their children in larger schools, Prasch said.

Board member Stan Linnertz said he wasn't certain of the public mood — "whether parents want neighborhood schools of bus-in schools."

The district cannot afford to build where the children live plus keep all other schools open. "We have to mesh the two together (building and closing)" in order to keep the total square footage of school space manageable, he said.

However, it is hard to explain to the public that we are closing one building and in the same breath say we are building a new one, said board member Williamette Shafer.

Some possible futures decisions were discussed including refurbished both Clinton and Elliott Schools, but eventually closing nearby Hartley School, and sending elementary children from Havelock and Norwood Park to Pershing Elementary.

Cheney dissolution questioned

Cheney School District taxpayers presented a petition asking the Lincoln Board of Education to take over a part of the Class I district during the board's Tuesday meeting.

But one objecting Cheney parent asked the board to look into what he called misinformation about the issue and the arbitrary reassignment of children to different districts under the Cheney dissolution plan.

"Some members of the committee have no children in the Cheney school, some never have and some never will," said Jim Arnot, who asked Lincoln board members not to approve the dissolution petition.

The petition, presented by Jerry McCall, a consultant representing Cheney residents who favor dissolving the district, asks that the district be divided among Lincoln, Waverly, Palmyra and Norris districts.

The petition has been signed by more than 60% of the legal voters in the Cheney district and must also be approved by 60% of the Cheney school board and the boards ot districts which would take the Cheney children, according to McCall.

The petition also has to go through a series of three public hearings before the district can be abolished.

Under the plan the four districts would divide the children and assets of the Cheney School District with Waverly getting 13 children and $1,207,670 in assessed valuation; Palmyra getting three children and $196,935 in assessed valuation; Lincoln getting 18 children and $701,034 in assessed valuation and Norris getting eight children and $715,945 in assessed valuation.

Arnot called the current petition drive the "path of least resistance," and said that many parents who opposed closing the 44-pupil Cheney elementary school were never contacted.

The current school is well equipped and able to handle the current and future needs of the Cheney area, Arnot said.

And he brought figures he said showed that a 32-house development next to Cheney will not overcrowd the current school. Currently 37 children, including 18 pre-schoolers, live in the 31 completed homes, he said.

The Cheney school can accommodate 70 children, he said.

The Lincoln board will make no decision on the Cheney petition until the Oct. 25 meeting

The board gave unanimous support to Pershing parents who want a traffic light installed at the 70th and Fremont intersection.

A 6-year-old school boy was injured at the intersection this fall and parents are trying to get a light, scheduled for installation by next Sept., put in earlier.

The board also heard a report on changes in the amount of carbohydrates and fats used in the school lunch program, including giving whole wheat bread to elementary children, draining canned fruit, decreasing the use of butter or margarine on vegetables, discontinuing the frosting of cinnamon rolls and decreasing the amount of frosting on deserts.

Norris School construction contracts awarded

The Norris school board Tuesday night awarded contracts totaling more than $1 million to four firms for construction of an addition to Norris Middle School, Supt. Dennis Nossel reported.

All contracts were awarded to low bidders, he said. Construction of the 40,000-square-foot addition, which will house nine classrooms, gymnasium, media center, resource room and offices, is hoped to be completed in December 1978.

Low bids were:

C & R Engineering, Inc., Beatrice, general contractor, $775,192.
W.F. McCormick Inc., York, mechanical contractor, $186,600.
AVC Electric of Hastings, Inc., electrical contractor, $100,850.
Western Laminates, Inc., Minneapolis, educational equipment contractor, $28,585.

Motorist who hit girl asked to phone police

Police asked that the driver of a car which struck an 8-year-old girl at 17th and Ryons Tuesday report to police.

Dawn Klein, of 1835 Ryons, received a minor hip injury when struck by a light green subcompact car, police said.

The driver left the scene after the girl told him she was not hurt, police said. However, Dawn was treated at Lincoln General Hospital after walking home.

Police said no charges are planned, but that the driver's name is needed for insurance and police records.

Dynamite bomb found

Members of the New York City bomb squad work on a dynamite bomb found in a concrete tree planter outside the General Motors Building at 59th Street and Madison Avenue Tuesday. The device was removed before it could explode. Later a bomb went off on the steps of the public library but it did little damage.

Conflicts issue steered aside by UNL faculty

Faced with the possibility that opening up the conflict of interest issue would jeopardize faculty members' current ability to do outside consulting work, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate decided to bury the issue.

The senators resoundingly defeated three resolutions dealing with conflict of interest Tuesday.

They decided not to ask Miles Tommeraasen, vice chancellor for finance and business, to resign his directorship at Security Mutual.

Senator Michael Steinman, associate professor of political science, introduced the Tommeraasen resolution because he felt that there could be an appearance of a conflict of interest.

But Donald Haack, professor of engineering mechanics, pointed out that in a mutual company there are no stockholders, that policyholders are the owners of the company and that Tommeraasen represented the university as policyholders.

"In this regard he is serving the interests of the university." said Haack.

Other senators also said that both NU attorneys and regents had investigated any potential conflict of interest before Tommeraasen accepted the $3,600-a-year directorship.

Senators also agreed that the current regents bylaws covering conflict of interest should not be changed.

Steinman had asked that the regents bylaws be changed to outlaw administrative officers from holding any position in any private concern doing business in a functional area touching upon his university responsibility."

People have good things to say about Misle Chevrolet's Service Department.

"Misle's service department has been taking care of our fleet of 30 vehicles for about 3 years. They are concerned about our problems and make an honest effort to get our trucks back in service, in most cases the same day. Their service personnel are always courteous and friendly. Our company is very satisfied with the job they do."

Porras shooting suspect sought

Chihuahua, Mexico (AP) — Police are seeking a "strong suspect" in the slaying of Stanley Porras Cardenas of Scottsbluff, Neb., who was shot to death Sunday as he was driving his car about 60 miles south of Chihuahua.

A police spokesman confirmed that Porras was shot to death and added, "We have a strong suspect." He refused to give more details.

Authorities reported Porras was killed near the Colonia Lazaro Cardenas ranch about 25 miles north of Ciudad Delicias. His body was taken to Chihuahua to the state university's medical school for an autopsy.

Porras was a former executive director of the Nebraska Mexican-American Commission.

Officials in Lincoln, Neb., said Porras was shot while en route from El Paso, Tex., to Juarez, Mexico.

Police in Cuidad Delicias declined to disclose the cause of death until the autopsy report was delivered.

"We are investigating the incident both here and in Ciudad Delicias," said a police spokesman at the judicial police headquarters in the state capital at Chihuahua, which borders the United States.

"We will have no information on the incident until the investigation is finished," the police spokesman said.

Pete Urdiales, who replaced Porras in the commission post, said he was notified of the incident by a cousin of Porras.

Urdiales said Porras was en route to receive some land in Mexico inherited from his father and that his automobile was shot at.

Urdiales said the body will be flown to Scottsbluff, where his widow, Frances, lives.

Porras served as the commission's executive director from June 27, 1972 until his resignation last March 1.

He was charged in Lincoln in February with breaking into a neighbor's home, stealing a ladder, a saw and some other light construction equipment.

He was free on $1,000 bond and trial had been set for May, but Porras was not in the city at that time.

Antarctic ice drilling project will be resumed this year

United Press International

A group of scientists and technicians, including seven attached to the Ross Ice Shelf Project management office at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, will renew an attempt to drill a hole through an ice shelf attached to the Antarctic continent.

When the Antartic winter closed in and the drill bit became jammed due to unexpectedly fast movement of the ice last year, the Ross Ice Shelf Project drilling team had penetrated 330 meters into the ice, about 90 meters short of seawater.

The project is under the direction of Dr. John Clough of Lincoln, who said team members will spend two to four months in Antarctica conducting scientific activities on the floating ice mass that has an area 2½ times that of Nebraska.

He said the group's chief goal is to examine the ice core that is extracted from the hole, the water column, marine life and sediment beneath the shelf.

"We can learn a great deal about the history of our planet," Clough said. "The ice core we take from the hole provides a record of the climate and atmosphere for up to 10,000 years.

"While studies of the sediment beneath the shelf, and the water and the life it supports, may give us new knowledge based on these unique conditions," he said.

The camp's facilities from last year "will still be there and will only require that we dig out about three feet of snow which has drifted up around the buildings," Clough said.

"The drilling and the scientific studies that go with it are our main concern this trip," he said. "A geophysical survey begun in 1973 will also be completed this season."

He said, "The results of these studies of the characteristics of the ice shelf, the velocity at which it moves and the measurements of strain that this movement causes may help determine if the polar ice caps are growing or receding."

Tangeman said Peru's first choice

Nebraska City (AP) — Dr. Larry Tangeman, academic vice president at Chadron State College, reportedly is the leading candidate for the presidency of Peru State College.

The Nebraska City News-Press reported Monday that Tangeman is leading two other candidates to replace Dr. Douglas Pearson as Peru president.

Ward Reesman of Falls City, a member of the State College Board of Trustees, said no selection has been made, but the newspaper said the appointment is expected to be announced at the board's next meeting in Lincoln on Oct. 28.

Joan Little appeals dismissal from job

Raleigh, N.C. (AP) — Joan Little, acquitted in a much-publicized murder case, has appealed her removal from a work-release job for missing work as a dentist's assistant two days last month.

State prisons director Ralph Edwards was to decide the question within a week, Ben Runkel, prison information director said.

Miss Little is serving 7-10 years for breaking and entering.

Curtis asks for Exon explanation

Associated Press

U.S. Sen. Carl Curtis says he wants to know whether Gov. J. James Exon supports or opposes the controversial O'Neill Unit irrigation project.

Exon was quoted recently in news articles as saying he has some questions about the project and hasn't decided whether to support its construction.

Curtis, in a letter to Exon, said that is directly opposite what state officials representing Exon, and Exon himself, have told Congress in the past.

Exon was out of town Tuesday and unavilable for comment. However, Exon aide Norman Otto said Exon hasn't changed his basic position on the O'Neill Unit.

His position is that he supports the project and other irrigation projects as long as they are feasible under the several criteria by which water projects are measured, Otto said.

But Exon also believes all projects should continue to be reviewed and questioned right up to the start of major construction, Otto said, and should merit support only so long as they pass review.

Curtis noted Exon was quoted in news reports as saying he'd only recently learned from federal officials that water flowing in the Niobrara River below the proposed Norden Dam would be reduced to half its normal flow if the dam is built.

Testimony by former State Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher, on behalf of Exon, before Congress in 1972 noted this reduction in flow, Curtis said. Kreuscher also said the state had spent considerable time studying the project.

Curtis told Exon: "I believe that the evidence now available within the state of Nebraska— in the Water Resources Department, Natural Resources Commission, University of Nebraska and with the U.S. Geological Survey and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation—should answer any questions you have remaining about the value of and need for the O'Neill reclamation project."

Curtis also noted news reports quoted Exon as saying he plans to invite Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to Nebraska to tour the project site and discuss concerns about the project.

Earlier this year, the Carter administration reviewed many federal water projects across the nation, Curtis reminded Exon.

State Digest

Paving planned

Albion (UPI) — The Albion Airport Authority has accepted a low bid of $198,445 submitted by a Harlan, Iowa firm for paving improvements at the municipal airport.

Authority chairman Keith Stewart said a $297,000 federal grant will pay for 90 percent of the project. The authority will pay 6 percent and the state aeronautics department will pay 4 percent of the estimated $330,000 total project price. Nearly $42,000 has already been spent for land acquisition, he added.

Bison to be sold

Crawford (UPI) — Surplus bison from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's herd at Fort Robinson State Park will be sold at public auction Wednesday afternoon in Crawford.

Gary Schlictemeier of Alliance, herd manager, said the animals are "top quality" that would be an "excellent addition to anyone wanting to upgrade their herd."

Trial postponed

McCook — The trial of two Mid-Plains Technical Community College officials and a former college janitor, charged with slandering and defaming former college music professor Dr. Charles Lawson and his daughter Bambi, has been postponed until May.

Harold Kay, attorney for the college, said the trial, originally scheduled to begin this week in U.S. District Court in North Platte, had been delayed at the request of attornies representing the defendants, Dr. William Hasemeyer, Dr. John Harms and Fred Peek.

Lawson and his daughter filed suits seeking $5 million in damages for remarks allegedly made in July 1976. Lawson resigned his job in August, 1976.

Banker retiring

Louisville — Lousiville banker Harvey Koop is ending a 58-year career at the Home State Bank.

The 80-year-old Koop began his career as a teller-sweeper in 1919 and has served as bank president since 1972, assuming the post after the death of his brother Harold.

School dedicated

North Platte — A letter from former first lady Mamie Eisenhower was presented to the faculty and students of North Platte's newest elementary school, Eisenhower Elementary, during dedication ceremonies this week.

The handwritten letter was read by third grade teacher Ramona Miller after opening remarks by Congresswoman Virginia Smith. Mrs. Smith also presented the school with a flag which flew over the Capitol in Washington, D.C. and a picture of the former president.

Everyone reads

Ogallala — Everyone at Ogallala's West Fifth Elementary School takes 10 minutes to read at precisely 10:20 a.m. each weekday.

The new plan, started last week by principal Barbara Nootz is based on several similar programs used elsewhere in the country, she said. The "everyone" in the program means just that, she added. Students, teachers and all building personnel, even visitors, must read something during the 10 minutes.

The million-dollar facility has an enrollment of 147 students through grade six.

Nursing course set

Omaha — A six-week "Critical Care Course for Nurses" is currently underway at the University of Nebraska Medical Center's College of Nursing in Omaha.

The course, for nurses who work with critically ill patients, will include 80 hours of classroom instruction covering the cardiovascular, respiratory, renal and nervous systems of the body.

Senator may run

Scotia (UPI) — State Sen. Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia said he plans a Decmember announcement of whether he will seek the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor.

The 48-year-old, first elected to the Unicameral in 1972, said he has met with party leadership and expressed interest in the post. A decision will probably be made "the first part of December," he added.

Rain slows harvest over much of state

Rainfall has slowed harvest progress across most of the state but nearly 30 per cent of the corn crop has been harvested compared to about 25 per cent a year ago.

This was disclosed Monday in the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service's weekly crop-weather report.

More than 30 per cent of the grain sorghum harvest has been completed, compared with 50 per cent a year ago. Ninety per cent of the crop is estimated to be ripe, about the same as a year ago.

About 20 per cent of the state's soybean crop has been completed, compared to 55 per cent last year at this time.

Winter wheat seeding progressed rapidly during the past week with over 90 per cent of the acreage now planted. Sugar beet harvest has begun and most processing plants are now open.

Topsoil moisture supplies are now rated as surplus in 24 per cent of the counties, adequate in 67 per cent and short in nine per cent. A year ago topsoil moisture was rated adequate in 48 per cent and short in 52 per cent.

Rainfall received throughout the state during the past week included:

Bluffs curfew plan modified

Council Bluffs (AP) — The Council Bluffs City Council gave second-round approval to a proposed curfew ordinance Monday night and removed 17-year-olds from its provisions.

City Clerk Olga Arellano said the ordinance will come up for final approval Oct. 24 and, if passed, could become effective by the Oct. 29-30 weekend.

The curfew would be in effect from midnight until 5 a.m. for youths 16 and under.

Bill is for refugees

Washington (UPI) — The Senate approved legislation enabling about 150,000 refugees who fled Indochina after the Vietnam War to qualify for U.S. citizenship as resident aliens.

Sioux City suspect resists extradition

Omaha (UPI) — A suspect in a double-slaying at a Sioux City, Iowa, trailer court refused to waive extradition to Iowa Tuesday to face open charges of murder.

Municipal Judge Francis McClane set a tentative Nov. 14 extradition hearing date for Frederick L. Pletka, 22, of Omaha, who was arrested last Saturday for the Thursday night deaths of Robert F. Schmechpepper, 51, and James E. King, 38.

Omaha police originally had said Pletka indicated he would waive extraditin, but that was apparently before Pletka met with counsel from the Douglas County public defender's office.

McClane ordered Pletka held without bond on a fugitive from justice warrant. Authorities in Sioux City have filed two open murder warrants against him.

The bodies of Schmechpepper and King were found Friday in a three-bedroom mobile home on Sioux City's east side by teachers at Western Iowa Technical College, where Schmechpepper was an instructor.

A Sioux City police spokesman told reporters Tuesday both victims suffered knife wounds to the throat and one had a deep knife wound to the chest. Two knives, apparently belonging to the victims, were found in the trailer.

The spokesman said Pletka apparently met the two victims in a west Sioux City bar Thursday night and the three subsequently ended up at the trailer court located in the eastern part of Sioux City.

The spokesman said the bodies of Schmechpepper and King were found in opposite ends of the trailer. An estimated $20 was taken and apparently spent by Pletka, the spokesman said.

Police have theorized Pletka subsequently took King's car and drove to near Omaha where the car broke down. Pletka was arrested without resistance at a restaurant in far north Omaha by police Saturday.

The Sioux City police spokesman said Pletka said he was a Sioux Indian and was raised near Wagner, S.D.

Pletka apparently had relatives in Sioux City, the spokesman said.

The Douglas County attorney's office said it would take about 90 days for the extradition procedure to be completed and the Nov. 14 hearing would probably be continued unless Pletka changes his mind.

Sioux City authorities now have to ask Gov. Robert D. Ray to write Gov. J. James Exon for Exon's permission to extradite Pletka.

Farm strike pledges made at rally

Scottsbluff (UPI) — Farmers from Nebraska's Panhandle, asked to indicate whether they would support a farm strike, stood in the bleachers at Nebraska Western College and shouted, "I will."

The informal strike vote was led by officials from agriculture's militant new farm group, American Agriculture, who slowly built enthusiasm among some 500 farmers and their wives during the 2½-hour meeting Monday night.

When Darwin Hartferd asked at the beginning of the meeting how many farmers would support the strike, there was little response. At the end of the meeting he asked the question again.

Nearly all those present stood up and the pledges of "I Will, I Will" echoed in the gymnasium at the college.

American Agriculture's call for a farm strike was issued about four weeks ago, and support apparently is spreading.

Farmers from throughout the Panhandle turned out for the rally and paraded down the main streets of Gering and neighboring Scottsbluff before the meeting.

The event was similar to a parade from Arapahoe to Lexington and a rally in Lexington Oct. 3. About 35 farm trucks and tractors joined in a procession from Oregon Trail Park on the south edge of Gering to the college on the northeast edge of Scottsbluff.

Hartferd, of Limon, Colo., said farmers are demanding a guarantee that agriculture prices will reach 100% of parity. If the demand is not met, farmers will go on strike Dec. 14, withholding their produce and livestock and refusing to purchase equipment or supplies, he said.

"We choose to strike. We are trying to tell the other 94% of the population what we are going to do," said another speaker, Carl McClure, of Olney Springs, Colo.

Stan DeBoer of Elwood said when farm prices were at parity four years ago retail business were flourishing, people were working and people were buying. "That proves parity works," he said.

DeBoer suggested American diplomats be given "some of the surplus food the government says we have" to distribute in foreign countries instead of giving those countries billions of dollars in aid.

"The food will go further than money in making friends of the people in foreign countries," DeBoer said. The audience applauded.

There was also applause when McClure said, "We have 22 farm organizations working in Washington, but they aren't getting anything done for us.

When these people get to Washington they aren't farmers any more. They forget where they come from and who they represent."

Farmers are losing equity in their farms because of low commodity prices and rural communities are suffering the economic consequences, he said.

"We only want parity and a fair share of the market," said McClure.

Boy, 17, faces trial formurder

Omaha (AP) — Ronald Fort, 17, was ordered Tuesday to stand trial in Douglas County District Court for murder in the shooting death of a Nebraska Urban League executive.

Municipal Court Judge William Ryan ordered Fort to stand trial on charges of first-degree murder and auto theft. No trial date has been set and Fort is being held without bond.

Detective Jack O'Donnell testified at Fort's preliminary hearing that he talked to the youth after his arrest the day authorities found the body of Robert L. Davis.

O'Donnell said that after he talked to Fort, detectives were able to find Davis' body in a ditch just off Interstate 29 near the Glenwood, Iowa, exit.

Police determined that Davis, who was shot three times with a .22 caliber gun, had been killed within the Omaha city limits on the north shore of Carter Lake.

Omaha public schools record 471 serious discipline cases

Omaha (UPI) — The Omaha Public School District recorded 471 cases of serious discipline penalties among the district's estimated 50,000 students during the last half of the 1976-77 school year and of those 269 were appealed, a school board committee was told Monday.

Assistant Supt. Rene Hlavac said in about half the appeals, penalties were changed.

Seventeen per cent of the students affected were reinstated in classes, Hlavac said, while in another 34% the penalty given was upheld. The penalties included expulsion, reassignment, suspension or other punishment.

In addition, a board committee took no action on a report by Assistant Supt. Ron Anderson showing there were no grade school classes within the district this fall with more than 34 pupils.

Board member Gaynelle Goodrich recalled in the 1960s there were some grade school classes with more than 40 pupils.

"We've come a long way," Mrs. Goodrich said.

In two weeks, the committee is expected to discuss class size in "combination" classes which have children from two grades together.

Some board members want to decide whether limits should be set on the size of such classes.

Anderson said the district has 38 combination classes, all with less than 30 students each.

Overall, Anderson said out of the district's 1,005 elementary classes, 30 have more than 30 pupils and 39 have less than 20.

Convicted G.I. teen files for a new trial

Grand Island (UPI) — One of two Grand Island teenagers convicted of killing Grand Island businessman Donald Beery Jr. Tuesday asked for a new trial.

Attorneys for George Lanzendorf, 16, Tuesday filed a retrial motion, which said irregularities took place in the original trial. The motion also states the verdict "is not sustained by sufficient evidence" and is contrary to law. In addition, it contended an error of law occurred at the trial. The motion did not give details of the alleged error.

The motion also said the sentence imposed on Lanzendorf was excessive.

Lanzendorf was convicted and sentenced on a second-degree murder charge to 25 years in the state penitentiary in the May slaying of Beery.

The second youth, Bernard Schaeffer, was convicted of first-degree murder, and a three-judge panel sentenced him to life imprisonment.

Schaeffer's attorney had not filed a motion asking for a new trial.

The retrial motion in the Lanzendorf case is considered routine, and, if denied, would clear the way for an appeal to the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Lincoln school renovation wins showcase award

The Lincoln Public Schools and the Lincoln architectural firm of Davis, Fenton, Stange and Darling have been recognized for their contributions to the 1976 remodeling and renovation of Lincoln High School.

The project received an Award of Excellence in the 1977 Modernization Showcase Competition.

The project included creation of an 11,000 square foot media center, construction of a student lounge installation of new windows throughout the building, improved stairways and first floor air-conditioning.

If elected, he'd return Unicam pay

Grand Island (UPI) — Steve Milbourne, 28, Grand Island, said if he is elected to the Unicameral he will return his legislative salary of $4,800 to the 35th District.

Milbourne said Monday he will oppose incument State Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island in the 1978 general election.

"The salary is very low," Milbourne said, "But that's an additional $4,800 I feel does not have to be paid by the taxpayer."

Milbourne, who never has run for public office in Nebraska, said individuals concerned about the district and not about salary should be elected to the Legislature.

He and his wife, Nancy, own and operate a beauty school in Grand Island.

Fullerton FFA team wins land judging contest

Albion — A Fullerton FFA land judging team took first place in the north central area land judging contest held at Albion last week. Team members included Tony Lesiak, Paul McIntyre, John Dubas and Jerome Dubas.

Three teams from North Loup Scotia FFA took the next three places in judging. Fifth place went to Genoa. Top individual honors went to Tony Lesiak, Fullerton; Scott Noonan, North Loup-Scotia, Dale Bremer, North Loup-Scotia and Jerome Dubas, Fullerton.

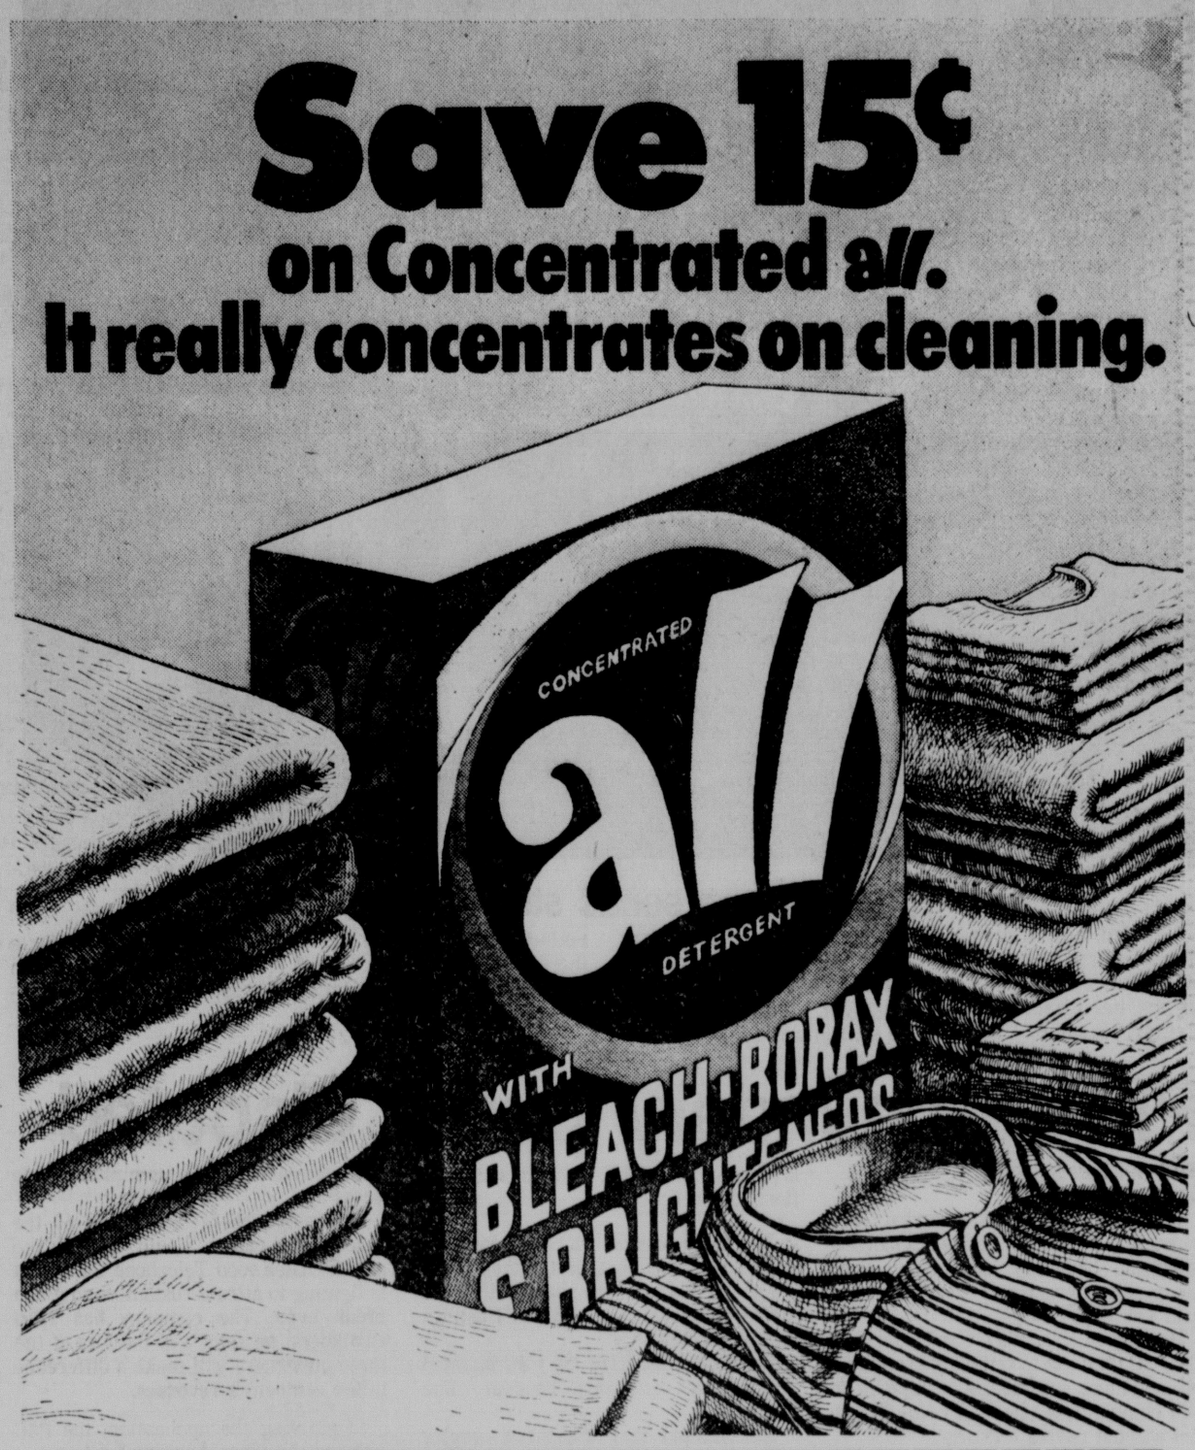

A Nance County 4-H team captured the top three team honors in that division. Greeley County and Valley County finished fourth and fifth. Pat Dubas, Jeff Hamel, Lori Sonderup and Donn Smith were members of the Nance County team.

Boy, 5, killed in farm accident

Humphrey (AP) — Funeral services were held Tuesday for Todd Wemhoff, 5, who was killed Sunday in a farm accident.

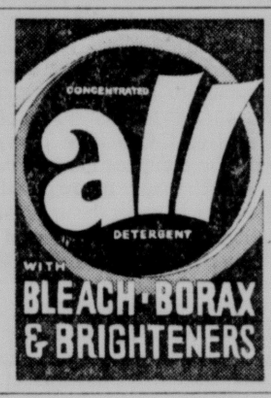

Authorities said the boy's father, Richard Wemhoff, was trying out a new auger when Todd fell into it. Neighbors said guard rails had not yet been installed on the machine.

Space lecture sends students into orbit

Third and fourth graders at Zeman Elementary School Tuesday got a preview of what space technology will be like when they are adults. Tom Hill, coordinator of the aerospace education project at Johnson Space Center, Houston, Tex., told the students about 70-million-pound rockets and $32.5 million satellites that will circle the sun in the decades ahead. Hill will be visiting Lincoln schools as part of the Lincoln Aerospace Community Involvement Program.

Phone boundary policy disputed

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

It's time for the Public Service Commission to review its policy of changing telephone boundary lines every time some subscriber wants it, an attorney said Tuesday.

Hastings lawyer W.G. Cambridge said the PSC "has got to rethink this problem of individual subscribers coming in to you complaining they can't call Grandma without paying a charge."

Situations like this "makes an impossible situation for your smaller telephone companies," Cambridge asserted.

Cabridge represents one such small telephone company, Glenwood Telephone co. in Blue Hill. That firm is fighting an Aug. 23 PSC order allowing three of its customers to change from their Glenwood Telephone Co. service to the Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. (LT&T).

The PSC had another hearing Tuesday to determine whether to revoke its order granting the application of three couples who farm near Ayr.

Franklin and Ruby Reis, David and Susan Fredricks and Ryal and Virginia Reis requested that the telephone boundaries be moved so they could be connected to the Hastings exhcange, which is served by LT&T. Ayr is south of Hastings on U.S. 281.

The three couples, who live near each other, contended that most of their family, social and business phone calls were made to people living in the Hastings service area.

Cambridge asserted the PSC violated the statutes governing boundary line changes.

He charged that the three couples already are receiving "reasonably adequate telephone service," as prescribed by state law, because the Glenwood company offers an optional calling plan. Subscribers may pay additional money to make toll-free calls during certain hours under such a plan.

Additionally, Cambridge charged there would be a duplication in service because LT&T would be required to build a new line to serve the applicants. The existing Glenwood line would be wasted, he said. That line costs $2,980.

He also said if LT&T has to pay another $3,000 to put in a new line, it will take ten years for LT&T to recover its money on the investment. That's important, he said, since LT&T has applied for a $6 million rate increase so it can receive the rate of return on its investment granted by the commission two years ago.

Cambridge charged the loss of the three subscribers would impair the smaller Glenwood Telephone Co. which is fighting to attract customers so it can break even. The company has 2,300 customers, he said, and the loss of the three customers will make a difference in the company's revenues.

In granting the application, the PSC ordered the three Ayr couples to reimburse Glenwood for the line.

commissioner Harold Simpson of Lincoln said he thought there would not be duplication of service because the applicants would buy the line from Glenwood and then could make an agreement with LT&T to use the same equipment.

However, Cambridge disagreed. He said the line still would belong to Glenwood.

Commissioner Duane Gay of Columbus, who was the only commissioner to dissent on the case, said to Cambridge, "It's abovious that you and me are the only ones in this room who agree."

The commission did not make a decision on whether to reopen the case or not.

Proposal would open PSC hearings

The Nebraska Public Service Commission held a hearing Tuesday on liberalizing its own rules on who can appear before the commission. It was a short hearing. Nobody came.

The proposed change in rules is aimed at opening commission hearings to allow anyone to testify on an issue, not just an attorney.

Existing rules prohibit a person from testifying if he represents a municipality, corporation, utility or other groups.

Previously, each of the five commissioners interpreted that rule widely.

It was Commission Chairman Duane Gay's ruling to allow a mayor to speak at one such hearing that resulted in an appeal to the State Supreme Court because Gay violated the PSC's own rules.

The Supreme Court reported that since decisions of the commission can be appealed to the Supreme Court, the proceedings of the commission should be conducted in a judicial fashion.

In rewriting the appearance rule, PSC attorney Hal Hasselbalch said the proposed change is a compromise solution.

the new rule would allow anyone to appear on his own behalf or represent a government, corporation or partnership. However, those witnesses would not be allowed to cross-examine or question other witnesses or to put witnesses of their own on the stand to testify.

The rules still would allow attorneys to represent clients and to question witnesses.

In view of the Supreme Court's ruling on the appearance rule, Hasselbalch admitted the proposal "may be questionable. But, the only way we would ever know or not is to have it tested in the court."

Gay said the commission recognizes the limitations placed on the regulatory agency by the high court.

"But, I think it is to the benefit of this commission to hear all the testimony," Gay added.

Gay said he expects the commission to act in the near future on the rule change.

Malpractice payments OKd

United Press International

The Department of Insurance may use money in a special fund to pay certain costs of the residual Malpractice Insurance Authority, but it cannot compensate the department's risk manager, the State Justice Department said Tuesday.

Insurance Director M. Berri Balka had requested the opinion to find out whether money in the excess liability fund could pay the authority's administrative and start-up costs because of insufficient premiums from the residual program.

A 1976 law created the fund to insure that money is available to pay malpractice damages above the basic insurance of the health care provider. The authority was formed to make the malpractice insurance available to health care providers who were unable to get coverage from private insurance firms.

The risk manager is an insurance department appointee who administers the residual program.

In the opinion filed by State Atty. General Paul Douglas and Assistant Atty. General Mel Kammerlohr, it was stated that using money from the fund to pay administration costs "would be perfectly proper."

However, the opinion said, the compensation of the risk manager requires payment for services on a percentage basis from all premiums received from the residual insurance. The opinion said state law clearly points that out.

"It would therefore not be proper to supplement the compensation of the risk manager out of the excess liability fund," the opinion said.

Lawrence man dies following traffic accident

Associated Press

The Nebraska State Patrol Tuesday reported the death of a rural Lawrence man who was injured in an Aug. 16 traffic accident.

Bernard Miller, 73, died last Thursday of injuries suffered in the two-car collision, the patrol said.

Miller was a passenger in one of two cars that collided on a county road three miles west of Nelson Aug. 16. Several other persons were injured in the accident, the patrol said.

Miller's death raised Nebraska's 1977 road toll to 271, compared with 309 a year ago.

Fire damages restaurant, lounge

Grant (UPI) — Fire that may have spread from a kitchen grill Tuesday destroyed the Steakhouse Restaurant and Lounge in downtown Grant.

Fire Chief Rod Hunt said the cause and source of the fire were under investigation, but he said the flames may have erupted from a kitchen grill, spreading up a wall and into the building's false ceiling. The restaurant and lounge are separated by a partitioned wall, but they are part of the same building.

Hunt said he was unable to estimate the dollar damage, but, he said, "it will be considerable. It's a total loss both for contents and the building."

No one was injured in the fire, which was reported about 6:30 a.m. CDT.

30 to hear bit of opera

Some 30 low-income minority and migrant youths from the High School Equivilancy program will attend an operatic performance Monday at 2 p.m. in the mini-auditorium of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Student Union.

The performance, sponsored in part by the Lincoln Action Program, will feature tenor Neil Rosenheim performing selections from various operas and discussing his own interest in opera.

Home ec students honored

Thirty students in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Home Economics were honored for scholastic progress this week at the Ellen H. Richards Dessert, an annual event sponsored by the student section of the American Home Economics Association.

Ten sophomores, juniors and seniors with the highest grades in their classes were recognized. In addition, the top two seniors, Mary Gehring of Bancroft and Cheryl Meyer of Wakefield, were each presented with a certificate of merit and a $50 check by Dorothea Holstein, president of the Home Economics Alumni Association.

Others receiving recognition were:

Sophomores: Barbara Bradley, Omaha; Denise Marie Bohling, Fremont; Debra Lea Capek, Milligan; Gerilynn From, David City; Janet Louise Schinker, Wahoo; Kerry Lynne Schmidt, Panama; Cheryl Marie Siefken, Wayne; Katherine Marie Siemer, Lincoln; Lila Louise Tooker, Ralston; and Debra Weiler, Palmer.

Juniors: Marcia Baumert, West Point; Deborah Borner, Lincoln; Kimberly David, Alma; Susan Engle, Geneva; Barbara Ferris, Archer; Karen Lee Johnson, Broken Bow; Jolene Lowell, Waverly; Shari Lee Nelson, Herman; Judith Rowe, Bellevue; and Donna Lee Wulf, Fremont.

Watershed project spurs Lincoln visit

Grand Island (UPI) — Ron Bishop, manager of the Central Platte Natural Resources District, Tuesday said he will be in Lincoln this week to explain the proposed $2.7 million Silver Creek watershed project to state resources development fund officials.

Bishop said the district is asking the state to cost share 75% of the project with the resources district paying the remaining 25%.

He said three subcommittees will question him about the project. There has been concern about the environmental impact of the project, Bishop said. However, he said, the benefits outweigh environmentalist concerns.

"First of all, it is a flood control project," he said. "If we can control the flooding over there that is an improvement to the environment."

During the 1967 flood disaster in central Nebraska, Bishop said, the upland game bird population in the area was affected considerably.

He also said much of Merrick County along Silver Creek would benefit from the project.

Bishop, who will be in Lincoln through Wednesday, said Land-owners are being asked to do some extra work on their land, which, if privately contracted, could cost up to $1 million. Fund officials have about 30 more days to make a decision on whether to finance the project, he said.

It's Dr. Farah

Tehran (UPI) — Empress Farah Pahlavi, the 39-year-old wife of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, received an honorary doctorate of humane letters from Pepperdine University of Malibu, Calif., at her palace in northern Tehran.

Bike path delayed, scaled down some

Construction of 3.8-mile bike path along Antelope Creek won't start until next spring, according to the City Public Works Department.

Work was to have begun this fall, but bids were rejected when they were about $100,000 higher than the estimated cost of $250,000.

In the meantime city engineers have scaled down the plans to reduce the bike path's cost.

One of the biggest revisions is to allow both asphalt and concrete contractors to bid on the proposed eight-foot wide path. Former plans allowed only asphalt contractors.

Mick McElvain said either surface is acceptable and that opening the bidding will increase competition. There are only two asphalt contractors in Lincoln capable of handling the project. There are several cement contractors that are qualified, he said.

Another revision is to eliminate two proposed underground crossings at Capital Parkway and A and Capital Parkway and 27th, McElvain said.

However, city engineers are planning to add the underground crossing at 27th and Capital Parkway to a street widening project, thus transferring the cost.

In addition, engineers are planning to use an existing 800-foot stretch of asphalt bike path near the Children's Zoo as part of the 3.8-mile path. Earlier plans had called for removing the existing path because it was only six and one-half feet wide.

The city is planning to solicit bids in February for the revised project and construction is slated for next spring. Eighty per cent of the $250,000 project is being covered by special federal funds for bike paths to be used primarily by commuters, rather than recreational bicyclists.

Coal train derails at Hampton

Hampton (AP) — A loaded coal train headed east derailed early Tuesday just outside this south-central Nebraska community, Burlington Northern Railroad said. No injuries were reported.

John Yant of BN's Denver regional office said 26 cars overturned, spilling coal along the tracks. The derailed cars were cleared from the railroad line late Tuesday afternoon, he said.

The incident occurred about 5 a.m.

Gambling sought in resort hotels

Vina del Mar, Chile (UPI) — Hotel managers have asked authorities to permit gambling in hotels in this Pacific sea resort.

Gaming tables and slot machines in the hotels would stimulate tourism, according to the hotel managers. Only the city-owned casino is open for gambling.

New York (AP) — The stock market yielded again Tuesday to fears of tighter credit, lapsing into a broad decline that left the Dow Jones industrial average at a 22-month low.

Dow Ind. —7.88

The widely recognized average of 30 blue chips fell 7.88 to 832.38, its lowest close since it stood at 824.15 on Dec. 9, 1975.

Losers outweighed gainers by more than a 2-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, and the NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks fell .41 to 52.09.

Analysts said the main force behind the market's slump was fear of a new round of accelerating growth of the money supply, credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve and rising interest rates.

There were widespread forecasts that weekly data to be issued by the Fed on Thursday would show a sharp rise in the basic measure of the money supply.

Even with declines in the past two reporting weeks, the money supply continues to grow at a faster pace than the Fed wants it to in its effort to control inflationary pressures.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, October 12, 1977

The great dancer Nijinsky was a Pisces – he was born under the sign of the feet and his art transcended the ballet. He communicated via the dance — his abilities stand unequalled. His horoscope reveals tremendous physical energy, an innate sense of drama and showmanship, petulance, sensitivity, living always slightly ahead of the "current time." Vaslav Nijinsky, born February 28, 1890 — his chart depicted a unique vitality, a gift to see beyond the present, a wry kind of humor, wavering from the childish to the sophisticated. Wherever in th world there is ballet, the name "Nijinsky" is revered.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be cautious, take conservative course, avoid speculative ventures. Collect and analyze data. You'll be dealing with one who wants facts, figures. Do your homework. Be familiar with basic material. Check agreements, bills of sales, leases, insurance policies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What seemed mundane takes on aura of excitement. You're going places, you're moving out of shell, more recognition is due and you'll be dealing with Gemini, Sagittarious person. Legal "block" turns out actually to be an asset.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Creative resources are emphasized. Accent on excitement of discovery, change, variety, travel, intensified relationship. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio figures prominently. Stick to number "4." Yes, the answer is forthcoming — after annoying delay.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You break free from restrictions. You're flattered by those you respect. You seem to "flower." Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarious figure in scenario. Accent on hard news, getting confirmations, building on solid structure.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Check security, family, budget, authenticity of art objects. Be discriminating where purchases are concerned. Taurus, Libra figure prominently. Stick to number "6." Relative with problems becomes very vocal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Hold off on long-range commitments. Information received is apt to be based on superficial structure. See through clouds of wishful thinking, pretense, false pride. Finances require more-than-usual attention. Also, protect valuables. Take no unnecessary risks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cycle is such that efforts bring tangible results. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Stick with number "8." Money picture is brighter than in recent days. You get assignment, commission. Take a chance on your own capabilities — now is time to lead rather than follow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish, get rid of unnecessary expense, streamline operation, deal with Aries, Libra individuals, stick with number "9." What had been a "family skeleton" is out-in-the-open and this is to your ultimate advantage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friend has something "private" to relate. Situation is both delicate and humorous. Accent on letting cat out of bag, confiding feelings, confessing attraction towards one who "belongs" to someone else. Some ties are broken as you make promising, fresh contacts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You gain advantage through social contact. One who pulls strings of authority does you a favor. Collect data. Do your homework. Build for future; insure valuables. Cancer figures prominently. Stick to number "2."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Gain indicated through travel, communication, publication. Gemini, Sagittarius persons are part of scenario. Stick to number "3." Yes, the news has been received — and there will be more mirth than moroseness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Plans bear fruit. What appeared a revolutionary procedure turns out to be practical, workable. You gain cooperation from one close to you. Financial situation is brither than it appeared a short time ago. Scorpio figures prominently.

IF OCTOBER 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have sense of hummor, fondness for art, travel — and you also have a weight problem. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You are creative, interested in many subjects and you display tendency to scatter forces. July was memorable — this year has seen you making new starts, gaining added independence, leaving behind your "security blanket." You are on brink of creative adventure. Welcome friendship of one who cares — that friendship could be transformed into love.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Huskers drop to ninth in both polls difficult to explain

Don't call me about the latest AP and UPI polls. I fielded so many phone calls from irate Big Red fans after they became public yesterday afternoon I've got a sore ear.

Nebraska wins its fourth straight game and drops in both ratings! The huskers beat Alabama. The Crimson Tide is fourth. Nebraska is ninth.

Oklahoma has an even bigger complaint coming. The Socners lose a close contest to Texas, which on the basis of that game deserves to second. But Oklahoma drops to sixth and seventh — in both cases behind the Ohio State team the Sooners beat in Columbus.

Colorado, which has topped the likes of Kent State, Army, New Mexico (which has beaten only Hawaii in five games), and three-time loser Oklahoma State, is now third in the nation.

You figure it out. I can't.

Obviously, the weekly ratings produce the desired result — good conversation for the coffee klatch and the basis for a lot of arguments.

Maybe Nebraska doesn't belong in the top ten. Or, it could be the Huskers belong up among the leaders. The next two Saturday's will determine that. Getting past a tough Iowa State defense this week could help prove a point. The showdown with Colorado the next Saturday will be the real decider.

Hipp's 254 yards against Indiana ranks as the top performance by a runner in any single game in the nation this fall.

Becoming No. 6 in the country is all the more amazing since Hipp didn't carry the ball a single time in the epening game against Washington State. Quarterback Randy Garcia tried to hand him the ball once, but since he didn't gain possession, the fumble that followed — and the plus or minus yardage that resulted — became part of Garcia's statistics.

Then, in the second game against Alabama, Hipp carried but six times for 38 yards. Yet, his 621 yards is divided by the full five games the Huskers have played, since he saw some action in each contest.

The resulting 124.2 yards-per-game average is just three-tenths of a yard from placing him fifth on the list. That spot is held by Earl Campbell of Texas at 124.5.

The nation's leader is Charles Alexander of LSU with a 156.2 average, while Oklahoma State's Terry Miller is second at 155.2.

Hipp's 8.2 yards-per-carry average is the best among the nation's top 25 ball carriers, however. Next is Ben Cowins of Arkansas, third on the list at 7.7. The leader, Alexander, and runnerup Miller sport 6.4 and 6.0 per-carry averages.

The woes of Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer and the Oklahoma City sports writers continues.

Remember the celebrated case of Frank Boggs, who reported the Sooners were being investigated by the NCAA. His life was threatened. Things were most uncomfortable for him around the OU campus. He's now sports editor of a Colorado Springs paper.

Now it's Walt Jayroe of the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman. At the Sooners' practice last Thursday, Jayroe noticed that OU defensive tackle Phil Tabor was not on the field — but in street clothes — because of a knee injury.

Switzer asked the reporters to suppress the news. All but Jayroe did. Jayroe says Switzer told them that his defensive game plan was based on Texas not knowing about Tabor's injury.

"What if we had been practicing the spread or the shotgun formation and I asked that he not run it?" Switzer asks. "It's gotten to where it's a one-way street with him. I know that he doesn't have to be for us, but he doesn't owe Texas anything either."

Jayroe and another Oklahoman reporter showed up for practice this week, but Switzer barred them both. Sooner workouts, the locker room and athletic dormitory are now off limits to the paper, they were told.

Blair's 12th inning single gives Yankees 4-3 victory

New York (AP) — Owner George Steinbrenner, who collected all the high-priced free agent talent for his New York Yankees, had to depend on a defensive specialist with his best days behind him to capture his club's 4-3, 12-inning victory in the first game of the 1977 World Series Tuesday night.

Paul Blair, inserted into the game for his glove — not his bat — was sent to the plate twice in extra innings with orders to sacrifice. He hasn't bunted yet.

In the owner's box, Steinbrenner watched as Blair failed to sacrifice in the 10th inning and then again in the 12th.

"I was yelling, 'C'mon, Paulie . . . that's five sacrifice bunts we've messed up,' " recalled Steinbrenner.

Paulie knew all about it. "I was disappointed I didn't get the ball down twice," said Blair.

In the 12th, the count reached 2-2 and Yankees Manager Billy Martin, perhaps tired of seeing sacrifices misfire, flashed the swing sign to Blair. "I think they (the Dodgers) might have thought I was still going to bunt," said Blair.

But Blair swung away instead and drilled a single to left field that scored Willie Randolph with the deciding run. In the owner's box, Steinbrenner beamed.

"I was delirious when he got the hit," he said.

Martin shrugged off the suggestion that his players might report for some bunting practice before Wednesday night's second game.

"It's a human part of the game," said Martin. "It's just part of the game."

And Tuesday night's dramatic opener is just part of the World Series. That's how Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda viewed the opening-game loss.

"To win the World Series, you've got to win four games, not one or two," he said. "Until you win four, it's not over. We'll bounce back. That's what we've done all season."

The Dodgers lost this thriller because of Blair's clutch hit and their own inability to touch reliever Sparky Lyle, who retired 11 consecutive batters after surrendering a game-tying, ninth-inning single to pinch hitter Lee Lacy.

Lyle, who had won the last two playoff games and pitched in two others against Kansas City, said his arm felt fine and he could go again Wednesday night.

Hunter gets starting nod

New York (UPI) — Manager Billy Martin, full of more surprises than a Christmas stocking, announced Tuesday night that Jim "Catfish" Hunter would pitch the second game of the World Series for the New York Yankees against the Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday night even though the veteran right-hander has not appeared in a game since Sept. 10.

The choice of Hunter was made because the Yankees' pitching staff is still tired from the recently concluded fivegame playoff series with Kansas City. Three of Martin's starters — Ron Guidry, Ed Figueroa and Mike Torrez — all pitched last weekend and have not had adequate rest.

Hunter, injured much of the year, has been out with a urological infection since Sept. 10 and was only 9-9 this year with an earned run average of better than four runs per game. However, he is regarded as one of the best post-season pitchers in the major leagues. Hunter has a 8-4 record in post-season competition —including a 4-1 World Series record.

"I haven't pitched in so long it will be like spring training for me all over again. My biggest problem will be control," Hunter said.

Yanks anger DiMaggio

New York (UPI) — Where have you gone Joe Dimaggio?

Not to the World Series — because his old ballclub, the New York Yankees, gave him a royal runaround when he came to Yankee Stadium to pick up his tickets.

DiMaggio, the Yankees' Hall Of Fame center fielder, flew in from Detroit to pick up his tickets for the Yankees-Dodgers World Series which opened Tuesday night. He arrived at Yankee Stadium early Monday morning to claim the tickets for which he had sent in a check well in advance.

Somehow, his tickets could not be located. Obliged to wait around for nearly two hours, "the world's greatest living ballplayer" became so incensed, he told the Yankees to keep the tickets.

He then called the Mets and they were able to provide him tickets immediately.

Carpenter doubtful for Iowa St.

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

Nebraska football co-captain Jeff Carpenter is a native Iowan. There's no game the Council Bluffs linebacker would rather play than this Saturday's clash with Iowa State.

But, as Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne's club prepares for the game — in the hopes of avenging last season's 37-28 upset loss to the Cyclones in Ames — Carpenter has watched from the sidelines in street clothes with a severe elbow infection.

"We hope Jeff will be well enough to practice Wednesday or Thursday and able to play some in the game," Osborne observes, "but right now he's very doubtful."

James Wightman has taken over Carpenter's spot on the Black Shirt (No. 1), defensive unit and will join Lee Kunz as the starting linebackers. If Carpenter can't play, Bruce Dunning becomes the first alternate on either side.

The Huskers held a brisk two-hour workout Tuesday — in even brisker weather — trying to further sharpen an offense that ranks seventh in the nation in rushing and 12th in total offense.

"We'll be facing what is probably the best defense in the Big Eight," Osborne warns.

Iowa State leads the league in defense against the rush and is second in both total defense and scoring defense.

While coach Earle Bruce's invading Cyclones have allowed an average of just 114 yards a game on the ground, Nebraska has averaged 300 yards a game by that method.

Does that mean the Huskers, known in recent years for their passing but who have gained just 55 and 59 yards through the air in the last two games, will use the pass more this Saturday?

"Iowa State has a sound overall defense," Osborne answers. "In order to win we'll have to do everything well."

NU 9th in both grid polls

From Press Reports

The Nebraska Cornhuskers, 26-9 winners over Kansas State Saturday, nevertheless dropped from seventh to ninth in the latest United Press International college football poll. The Huskers retained their ninth place ranking in the Associated Press poll released Tuesday.

Michigan took first place in both wire service polls.

Texas, 13-6 victor over Oklahoma Saturday, moved up to second and the Big Eight's Colorado is third.

Alabama, a team Nebraska defeated earlier in the year, ranks fourth in both polls.

Creighton Prep's Green top-seeded

Omaha — Two time defending state Class A singles champion Bob Green of Creighton Prep is no stranger to the No. 1 seed awarded him for Thursday and Friday competition in the state meet at Dewey Park.

But again, as in each of the past two years, Green's singles supremacy won't be enough by itself to put Prep solidly in the title picture.

Defending Class A Champion Omaha Westside appears a more likely champsionships contender despite not having a player in the top four first singles seeds.

While Green is Prep's only seeded player, Westside boasts seeded participants in the other three divisions, No. 2 singles (third seeded Dan Goldman), No. 1 doubles (second seeded Ken Somberg and John Staenberg) and No. 2 doubles (first seeded Chris Olson and Scott Perry).

Only Grand Island and Millard can match Westside's depth with seeded participants in three of the four divisions.

The No. 1 doubles top seed went to Hal Koch and Jim Backer of Omaha Central.

Lincoln Southeast, which tied for the state title in both 1975 and 1976, is the only Lincoln team with seeded players.

The Knights' Art Weaver is seeded second in No. 2 singles and the No. 2 doubles team of Mark Heng and John Peterson is also seeded second.

Competition will begin at 9 a.m. Thursday with the finals scheduled for 1 p.m. Friday in all four divisions.

While Class A competes at Omaha, Class B schools, anyone below the bottom 16 schools in enrolment, will square off at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

According to seeds released by the Nebraska School Activities Assn. favorites should include Papillion, Ralston, Norfolk and Lincoln Pius X.

Papillion's Bob Pannier and Clark Pannier hold the top seeds respectively in No. 1 and 2 singles.

Scout notices Waldemore

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Sitting on the sideline, intently viewing a Nebraska football practice last week, Steve Crosby deposited a portion of his chewing tobacco on the AstroTurf and drawled, "Y'all know something? I like that Waldemore."

Since appraisals of Husker talent by the few people who are allowed to watch the closed practice session are common place, Crosby's comment would have gone unheeded had it not been for the loose-leaf notebook he held in his left hand.

Printed on the front of it were two words: Miami Dolphins. A former player with the New York Giants and Dolphins, Crosby now makes his living as a scout for the Miami entry in the NFL.

So when a professional football scout speaks about talent, people listen.

"I like his size and quickness and the way he hits," Crosby continued.

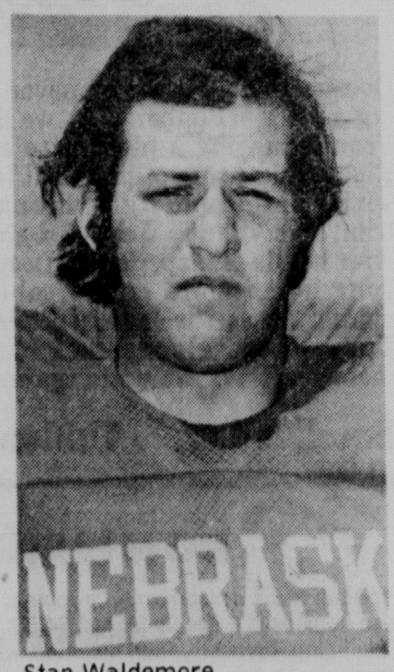

The object of Crosby's comments was Nebraska's right offensive tackle, Stan Waldemore, a 6-4, 260-pound senior blockbuster.

Because he plays a position where action is constant but press clippings sparse, Waldemore is probably not your basic household name in Nebraska football like, say, Isaiah Hipp.

Waldemore knows that fan anonymity comes with the job of an offensive lineman. But he can be content with the knowledge that people really in the know — people like Miami's Crosby — are very much aware of him and what he can do.

A member of what Husker coaches are calling one of the finest offensive lines in Nebraska history, Waldemore was doing his thing last Saturday in Manhattan against Kansas State.

He was one of the key ingredients that helped cook up Hipp's two touchdown jaunts of 66 and 82 yards. Both scores came on pitch plays around Waldemore's side of the line.

Stan Waldemore
. . . finally noticed

"I think because of plays like those and the fact we have been over 400 yards each game on offense that the line is getting a little more attention," Waldemore said. "But I don't really worry about attention that much. I worry about doing a good job and the team doing well."

Waldemore's arrival as a bona fide Cornhusker star and pro prospect is a personal triumph over frustration and adversity.

A highly regarded prep all-American at Essex Catholic High School in Belleville, N.J., Waldemore selected Nebraska after narrowing several college offers down to the Huskers and Ohio State.

Not even two visits to the Waldemore home by Ohio State's legendary coach Woody Hayes could win out over the sales pitch former Nebraska coach Monte Kiffin threw at the youngster.

"I was awed by Coach Hayes, like most people," Waldemore said, "but I really liked Coach Kiffin's sincerity. That meant a great deal to me."

Phone calls from former Nebraska all-Americans Larry Jacobson and Rich Glover (a New Jersey native) also helped.

"Nebraska football is big in Jersey," Waldemore said. "When I mention to someone back home that I play for Nebraska, they are familiar with the program."

The talented Waldemore leapfrogged over the Nebraska fresman program and joined the Cornhusker varsity the day he hit town.

After a trial at defensive tackle his first season and the following spring, when he injured a knee, Waldemore was switched to offensive guard and redshirted.

Switched to tackle last year, he showed his versatility by alternating at both guard and tackle during his junior season. In his final year as a Husker, Waldemore has finally found a home at right tackle.

"Sure, I got discouraged at times," he said, reflecting on his past. "But the coaches were honest and fair with me and pointed out the things I was doing wrong.

"Even though I was discouraged, I was confident I could play here if I worked hard enough, and it paid off."

Waldemore's hard work is paying off each Saturday for the entire Nebraska team. Ask Isaiah Hipp or Richard Berns. They'll be happy to tell you how much they appreciate Waldemore's efforts. So will the pro scouts.

New girl to fight for state golf title

Omaha — Despite having the top nine finishers back intact from last year's girls state high school golf championships, odds are they won't finish in anywhere near that order.

South Sioux City's Liz Weekes is probably planning on throwing a small monkey wrench into those finishes with her appearance on Omaha's Benson Park Golf Course when the tournament opens Thursday morning for the 18-hole event.

Weekes, the new girl in the tourney, isn't in her first year of high school golf, although she's never competed in the state meet held annually at Benson Park.

She served her apprenticeship playing with the boys team at South Sioux City and now, since this is her senior season, she wanted to try her last shot with the girls despite the fact South Sioux will not field an entire team.

"She'll be going by herself," said Liz' mother Ruth. "It's going to be tough on her because she hasn't had any competition this fall. She couldn't play with the boys and still play in the girls tournament."

Weekes will want to take direct aim on Lincoln Southeast's Sue Hergert, the returning medalist and Val Skinner of North Platte, the most consistent player this fall.

Last year, Hergert's effort guided the Knights to the state championship, and the entire Southeast team, including ninth place finisher Courtney Herman is back.

While Class A is being decided in Omaha, Class B is scheduled to run at Pioneers Park in Lincoln.

The list of Class B returners is almost as complete as those in Class A with the exception of the fifth and seventh place finishers from last year.

Aurora's Jan Stanard is the defending medalist.

Class A

1—Sue Hergert, Southeast; 2—Val Skinner, North Platte; 3—Cathy Nelson, Millard; 4—Julie Merwald, Omaha Marian; 5—Denise Thomsen, Columbus; 6—Marne Mainack, Omaha Northwest; 7—Sue Huston, Grand Island; 8—Terri Kraus, Kearney; 9—Courtney Herman, Southeast.

Class B

1—Jan Stanard, Aurora; 2—Susan Marchese, Omaha Duchesne; 3—Tammy Wagner, Plattsmouth; 4—Robin Richardson; 6—Laura Cunningham, York; 8—Shari Bals, Crete; 9—Kammy Maxfedt, Holdrege; 10 — Susan Muller, Fairbury.

Walton ends hospital stay

Portland, Ore. (AP) — Center Bill Walton of the Portland Trail Blazers was released Tuesday from Meridian Park Hospital where he had been in traction since Saturday.

A spokesman for the National Basketball Association club said Walton would not participate in Tuesday's practice session, but no decision had been made on whether he would go through light workouts on Wednesday.

Walton has missed the last four Blazer preseason games and is not expected to play when Portland meets Los Angeles in an exhibition game in Los Angeles Thursday night.

Coach Jack Ramsay said, however, that he hopes to have Walton back in action Saturday night for the team's final preseason contest against Golden State in Oakland.

Walton suffered a back injury while chopping wood prior to the start of training camp last month.

"It's not really a basketball-related injury," said Blazer trainer Ron Culp. "He chopped wood for something like six hours. When you're seven feet tall chopping down like that you're bound to aggravate something."

Walton, most valuable player in last season's NBA championship series, scored 18 points in Portland's first exhibition game, a victory over Denver, but played only nine minutes the next night in Seattle.

In preseason play the Blazers have a 3-3 record, 1-3 without Walton.

Nuggets obtain rookie Ellis

Denver (UPI) — Bo Ellis, a 6-9 rookie forward who led Marquette University to the NCAA basketball championship earlier this year, was obtained by the Denver Nuggets Tuesday in a trade with the Washington Bullets.

Nugget general manager Carl Scheer said Denver gave up its No. 1 college draft choice next year for the right to Ellis, who is expected to give the team additional power in the front line.

In three seasons at Marquette, Ellis averaged 14.6 points and 9.3 rebounds a game. During his senior year, he helped the Warriors to the NCAA title with a 15.6 point average.

"Ellis was a top draft choice this year," Scheer said. "And he comes from a winning tradition."

Ellis was the 17th player drafted in the first round earlier this year, but was used only sparingly in pre-season games. In four contests with the Bullets, he averaged only 15 minutes and four points.

Nugget Coach Larry Brown said Ellis would join the club immediately. The addition leaves the Nuggets with 13 players, two more than the NBA limit.

Upset win displays Links' Glathar

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Last weekend's Lincoln High score may have raised some eyebrows, but one of the key players making it happen is old news to coach Larry Frost.

Kurt Glathar, the Links' 6-2, 215-pound senior tackle, controlled Fremont's offensive and defensive lines like he was adjusting a thermostat as Lincoln High scored a 38-8 upset over the fourth-ranked Tigers.

"We were able to run over him most any time we wanted," Frost said. "He had a great defensive game, too. He had 10 tackles and otherwise dominated."

Frost is happy his Links produced the big win to showcase Glathar's talents, but the previous five opponents had experienced similar results.

"He's been our best football player all year," Frost said. "Every opposing coach has commented on his performance. If there's a better lineman in the state, I really would like to see him."

Glathar's performance earns the Sunday Journal and Star Athlete of the Week award. Others achieving the same honor include:

Tom Shires, Auburn — Rushed for 195 yards and four touchdowns (on runs of 57, 12, 10 and 49 yards) in team's 32-28 Twin Rivers Conference win over Plattsmouth.

Paul Maly, Wahoo Neumann — Playing for staunch wishbone team, junior split end caught key fourth down passes of 21 and 29 yards in last three minutes of team's 14-8 upset win over Class B's Columbus Scotus.

Craig Haas, Beemer — Rushed for 239 yards on 18 carries and had touchdown runs of 28, 56, 38 and 21 yards in unbeaten eight-man team's 41-28 win over previously unbeaten Decatur.

Troy Witherwax, Ord — One of only four seniors on the team, 5-10, 152-pound halfback showed versatility in 13-6 upset win over Central City with 69 yards rushing, five pass receptions for 41 yards and touchdowns. He also participated in 14 tackles and recovered a fumble.

Mark Monheiser, Potter — Sophomore quarterback hit 4 of 7 passes for 140 yards and two touchdowns (15 and 74 yards) and ran for another pair of TD's (1 and 29 yards) in unbeaten eight-man team's 40-26 win over previously unbeaten Dalton.

NCAA postpones O-State hearing

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — The NCAA Tuesday postponed a hearing on alleged rules infractions by Oklahoma State University because of a misunderstanding over persons qualified to attend, a spokesman for the athletic govening body said.

Spokesman Tom Hanson said the council will try to find a date at which a special meeting may be held to consider the matter prior to the NCAA's January convention.

"A hearing involving Oklahoma State University has been postponed by the NCAA council because of a misunderstanding as to the persons who are qualified under NCAA policies to appear in connection with such a hearing," Hanson said.

"The NCAA council regrets the misunderstanding," he said. "The council will make no further comments regarding the matter."

The statement followed a report by the NCAA's committee on infractions.

Reports this week have indicated the NCAA would set penalties including two years' probation with no television or bowl appearances, a loss of 15 scholarships over two years plus the ineligiblity of junior defensive end Mike Edwards and sophomore offensive tackle Jim Clark.

A group including Edwards and Clark along with legal counsel, head coach Jim Stanley and atheltic director Floyd Gass had intended to attend the hearing scheduled for 10 a.m. today.

Jim Treat, a Tulsa businessman alleged by the NCAA to have paid for a "signing party" for Clark, also was to have appeared.

Edwards was alleged to have charged a trip to his home in Plant City, Fla.

Bradshaw may play Monday

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Quarterback Terry Bradshaw remained optimistic Tuesday he would be able to play against Cincinnati next Monday despite his broken left wrist, but Pittsburgh Steelers' officials said they were several days away from making a decision on Bradshaw's eligibility.

"We won't know anything about Bradshaw until he takes some snaps and practices — and that won't be until Thursday at the earliest," a team spokesman said.

Bradshaw sprained the wrist in the Steelers' 17-10 loss to Houston last Sunday. Shortly after, Bradshaw's backup, Mike Kruczek, suffered a right shoulder separation, forcing the team to use safety Tony Dungy, a college quarterback, to direct the offense the rest of the game.

Kruczek will be put on the injured reserve list, the spokesman said. That means the second-year quarterback will be out for the season.

The Steelers Monday recalled former third-string quarterback Neil Graff, who was cut during training camp, and Tuesday Graff reported to begin studying the Steelers' playbooks with Coach Chuck Noll. Rookie Cliff Stoudt, a quarterback who has been on the taxi squad, Dungy, Bradshaw and Kruczek also were at the meeting with Noll.

If Bradshaw cannot play in the AFC Central Division contest with the Bengals, Graff would likely be the starter and Stoudt the backup.

Three other players injured in the Houston game were listed Tuesday as questionable.

Wishbone Neumann goes to air to get victory

By Randy York
Prep sports editor

Wahoo Neumann football coach Bob Brandt plants his tongue in his cheek, then observes: "Our passing statitiscs are a lot like BYU's — hard to believe — only it's the other way around."

Neumann, Class C-1's sixth-rated team which bumped Columbus Scotus from the Class B ratings with a 14-8 win last week, passes about as often as Barry Switzer loses.

Paul Maly, a 5-10, 150-pound junior split end, is Neumann's leading receiver this season with five catches for 104 yards. The Cavaliers' next leading receiver through six games has caught one pass.

"That's right — one. But several are tied with that," Brandt points out, moving his tongue to the side of his mouth again.

All of which leads to a point. Neumann, a staunch wishbone team which considers the pass akin to razzle dazzle, beat Scotus last week through the air.

And Maly may be walking the hallways this week, dreaming of becoming the Big Eight's next Tinker Owens.

In Neumann hearts, he is.

Trailing 8-6 with three minutes left in the game the Cavs got the ball on their own 30. The only one in town who didn't know they were going to pass was he checker at an all-night grocery store.

So, what happens?

On a fourth down situation, Maly leaps as if he's been launched from a pogo stick to haul in a crucial 21-yard pass reception in traffic.

On another fourth down, Neumann needs three yards and Maly runs a quick slant-in pattern. Scotus is whistled for interference and the drive stays alive.

On still another fourth down situation, Neumann really does resort to razzle dazzle with a halfback pass. Ma becomes a tight rope act, staying in bounds to snag a 29-yard catch, putting the ball on the Scotus six-yard line with 45 seconds remaining.

Two plays later, Neumann punches into the end zone to complete the upset.

"We finished 2-for-6 passing, but they may be the two biggest completions we have all season," observes Brandt, who took 14 of his players to Norman, Okla., last July to study the intricacies of the vaunted Sooner wishbone.

"We took our first three backfields and two centers," he says. "It really helped our timing and continuity. They worked 'em hard . . . three-a-day practices and they really went after it."

The result has been a remarkable blend of rushing talent. Halfback Mike Carroll has rushed for 440 yards. Halfback Rick Ahrens has 374, fullback Al Meduna 357 and quarterback Pat Martin 113.

They've come a long way since Milford turned the opening kickoff of the season into a 7-6 win over the Cavaliers.

Winning the Scotus game with the pass has wiped out that memory and given Brandt's team a rather unique confidence.

No doubt, you've seen it happen before and know what it can mean.

Pearson remains ahead of Dorsett

Dallas (UPI) — the Tony Dorsett-Preston Pearson situation will be unaltered this week, Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry said Tuesday. Pearson will start against the Washington Redskins. Dorsett will play — a lot.

And although the local fandom is frothing to see Dorsett gain 250 yards and score five times in a game, the faithful will have a hard time arguing with Landry's logic.

In four games this year the two have combined at the halfback spot for 493 yards rushing and 214 yards receiving.

Dorsett's 77-yard touchdown run against St. Louis last week — the longest from scrimmage in the NFL this year — and his 141-yard performance increased speculation that the 1976 Heisman Trophy winner would replace Pearson in the starting lineup this week.

"We will play them about the same way," Landry said. "Preston will start. Tony is making a lot of progress. He is making progress in every game. I just hope my backs — Tony, Preston and (fullback) Robert Newhouse — continue to play like they have been."

In earlier games Dorsett had often exited when a critical situation arose. He did not play, for instance, in the final moments or the overtime period in the season opener at Minnesota. But Dorsett played down the stretch of Dallas' 30-24 win over the Cardinals Sunday.

"Tony is still in the learning phase," Landry said. "He still doesn't make all the assignments. I just don't want to speculate when he might start or how I might play them in the future. Because if I do say something I will probably turn around and do the opposite later on and everyone will come back and remind me of what I said before."

Landry indicated that the more a running back learns the less chance he has to be injured, and that apparently has played a part in his decision not to keep Dorsett in a game all day.

"I want to see Dorsett here five, six, seven years from now," said Landry. "I don't want to just have him here this year.

"The less you know about the blocking patterns in front of you, the more apt you are to get hurt. He is still learning the patterns. But he might have played more if we had not gotten as good a performance as we have from Preston Pearson."

A victory over Washington would give the Cowboys a two-game lead in the NFC East and the Redskins could come into the game in their worst physical shape of the year.

Redskins coach George Allen visited by telephone with local media Tuesday and he chronicled a long list of injuries — including woes being suffered by linebacker Chris Hanburger, running back Mike Thomas, cornerback Pat Fischer and defensive tackle Dave Butz.

AAU events to be aired

Columbus, Ohio (AP) — Twenty-five Amateur Athletic Union events will appear on the nation's three major television networks next year, AAU executive Director Ollan Cassell announced Tuesday.

Cassell, here for the annual national AAU convention, said ABC, CBS and NBC will carry championships in six AAU sports.

He said ABC will pick up 13 events in five sports, including national championships in boxing, weightlifting, outdoor swimming, diving and track and field.

Cassell also said ABC would telecast the U.S.-Russia outdoor dual track meet and a pair of boxing meets betwen the two nations.

The NBC network has agreed to carry the AAU's National Junior Olympics, indoor national championships in swimming and diving and the powerlifting nationals.

Other events scheduled by NBC are the International Cup of Swimming, the Armed Services Boxing Championships, the Fort Lauderdale Diving Invitational, the Dan Ferris Invitational Track Meet and a pair of U.S.-Russia dual swimming meets.

Cassell said CBS will show the AU indoor national track and field meet.

Pius spikers down Spartans

East won the reserve match, 15-10, 15-12.

Lincoln symphony opens with new look, new faces

Review

By Richard Grace

The Lincoln Symphony Orchestra opened its 52nd season Tuesday evening at O'Donnell Auditorium. Under the leadership of Robert Anders Emile the program featured three orchestral pieces and a new look for the orchestra, many new faces and an ever-improving sound and quality.

The different appearance found a now strong viola section in front on the right interchanging with the cellos who are now in the center of the string core. Another change found the winds back on risers. It is difficult to estimate what change this makes in orchestral sound, but for those in the audience it is more visually enjoyable to be able to see those solo players at work.

Perhaps the most noticeable change in sound is in the lower string sections (bass, cello, viola and second violin) which can now compare more favorably to a good first violin section. The entire string ensemble does not appear to be any larger in number of players, but the group had fine moments of excellent ensemble sound, both as a complete choir as well as within the different sections. The remainder of the orchestral personnel is fairly well intact from last year. This evening's concert got some crisp solo work from the first-chair members of French horn, clarinet, oboe and flute.

The program selections were conservative in nature for the first concert featuring Berlioz, Haydn and Dvorak. The opening number, Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict" is one of the composer's last works. It shows Berlioz at his mature best despite the different (for Berlioz, anyway) lighter overtones of the comic opera.

Haydn's Symphony No. 103 in E flat major (with the drum roll) followed the overture. It is one of Haydn's so-called "London Symphonies" (eighth in a series of 12) and is one of Haydn's most popular with its opening ominous tympani rolls and forboding sounds in the lower strings and bassoons. After these sober sounds, typical Haydn bursts forth with frequent delightful melodies. The orchestra kept a tight, crisp sound throughout. Featured in the second movement of a theme and variations was Concertmaster Arnold Schatz in a charming major variation of the minor theme.

The final work displayed was Dvorak's Symphony No. 7 in D minor. It is not as well-known as many of his other orchestral pieces but the Lincoln Symphony did it justice, and it was a pleasure to hear it performed. Dvorak sounds many times like a transplanted Brahms and this piece was no exception.

The Lincoln Symphony is a fine orchestra, certainly not great by national standards but one of which a city can be justly proud. Much credit must be given to Dr. Emile for his leadership and encouragement in the past few years.

Model train setting record

Farmingdale, N.J. (AP) — A model train collector says his favorite train is setting a new world's record by running 273.85 miles non-stop — with no end in sight.

About 12 hours after passing the old mark, Henry Bodenstadt's German Pacific engine was still running. "We'll go until something breaks down," he said.

Bodenstedt said his Marklin train passed the old mark Sunday night after 10 days — more than 60,000 laps on a 5-by-8-foot track.

The 1977 Guinness Book of World Records lists the record as 273.84 miles.

Ord looks for way to span energy gap

Ord (UPI) — Ord Utilities Commissioner Gene Baugh Tuesday said natural gas supplies for the city's electric generating plant will be cut off in late October by the Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Co.

Baugh said Kansas-Nebraska will discontinue supplying Ord with natural gas as soon as the city's predetermined allotment of natural gas is used up. The city expects to use up its allotment later this month, he said.

Baugh also said this is the first time Ord has reached the ceiling on the annual amount of natural gas it can buy from Kansas-Nebraska. Because of this year's situation, he said, Ord may have to join other Nebraska communities in buying expensive fuel oil.

But, Baugh said, Ord is considering several ways of replacing its natural gas supply. The city could either buy expensive fuel oil or could purchase power from the Nebraska Public Power District.

In addition, Baugh said, Ord, which is a member of the Nebraska Municipal Power Pool, is building an interconnecting system to link Ord with other communities in the pool. Once the stystem is completed, Ord will be able to purchase energy from other communities, he said.

But, Baugh said, the interconnecting system probably won't be completed until early December. That means the city may have to buy power from NPPD for about a month, he said.

Lincolnite dies from injuries

St. Joseph, Mo. (AP) — Samuel Walters, 62, Lincoln, Neb., died Tuesday at a St. Joseph hospital from injuries suffered last Saturday in an auto accident south of St. Joseph.

Walters was southbound on Interstate 29 when his car crossed the median and struck a northbound vehicle, according to the Misssouri Highway Patrol.

Board's defense funds limited by opinion

The Lancaster County Board may have the authority to hire an outside attorney to defend itself against a suit by County Assessor Fritz Meyer, but the board has no authority to pay the lawyer from county funds, County Attorney Ron Lahners said Tuesday.

Meyer is suing the board in U.S. District court because of its method of handling pay raise funds. The $500,000 budgeted for cost-of-living raises for county employes this year will be held in a special contingency fund to be meted out as needed by departments.

Meyer claims this money should be included in the budgets of each department to be spent as department heads see fit.

Lahners has issued an opinion supporting Meyer's position and has said his office cannot legally represent the board in the matter.

According to Lahners, the commissioners would be justified in paying an outside lawyer only if they win their case. If the court decides the commissioners' action is "not in the interest of the county," they could not pay their lawyer out of couty funds, he said.

Commissioner Jan Gauger said a private attorney's opinion solicited by the board indicates to her that hiring a defense counsel would be legal.

It would be "in the best interest" of the county for the board to defend itself against the suit, Mrs. Gauger said.

Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton said he intends to stay out of the dispute. He voted against the salary contingency fund because he said he did not think the board had a good case.

Welfare building may be up for bids

The County Health and Welfare Building at 2200 St. Marys Ave. must be put up for public bids before it can be sold to Lincoln General Hospital, county Attorney Ron Lahners said Tuesday.

Before bids can be let, the board must hold a public hearing on the question, he said.

Until Tuesday, board members had been acting under the assumption that no public hearing or bidding process was necessary because it would be a transfer of property from one governmental entity to another.

The state law allowing such transfers was stricken from the statutes during the last legislative session, at the same time that a law requiring a popular referendum on the sale of county property was removed.

The building, which presently holds Welfare Department offices as well as the city-county Health Department, has been appraised at $1 million.

Green Guide out for London

London (UPI) — A Green Guide for sightseeings in London has been published by Michelin for the first time. The 192-page soft-cover booklet lists all the major attractions and includes maps of the city, background and detailed information on facilities, transportation, entertainment, shopping, etc.

Michelin also publishes a hotel and restaurant guide to Greater London and a hotel and restaurant guide to Great Britain and Ireland.

County subdivision gets final approval

The County Board Tuesday approved the final plat of Pawnee Estates, a 14-lot subdivision north of Pawnee Lake.

The developer is among the first to meet the county's new requirement of a hydrological survey. Water for the subdivision will be provided by individual wells, and sewage disposal will be by septic tanks.

In other business, the board deferred action for another week on a recommendation by the Street Name Committee to change the name of Buda Rd. to Pella Rd.

Commissioner Jan Gauger moved to defer action so that the costs of such a change may be studied.

Suspect undergoes surgery

Hasting (UPI) — Adams County Attorney Art Toogood said Tuesday a suspect charged in a shootout with a sheriff's captain had returned to an Omaha hospital for corrective surgery.

Toogood said Andrew Patsios, 19, would undergo the minor surgery at the University of Nebraska Hospital. The surgery was necessitated by gunshot wounds Patsios suffered during a late April shootout with Sheriff's Capt. Gregg McGee.

The county attorney said Patsios, who originally underwent treatment in Omaha, had been hospitalized at the Hastings Regional Center but refused surgery there.

Patsios is charged with shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim, resisting an officer, auto theft and use of a firearm in commission of a felony.

McGee, who was shot while attempting to apprehend Patsios as he left a Hastings bank, has since returned to duty. Patsios, a former Fairfield resident, was apprehended near the regional center shortly after the incident.

The county attorney said the county was liable for medical bills from the time Patsios was formally charged in August, but the question about the payment of his medical bills prior to that time remains unresolved.

Cancer society board posts go to Lincolnites

Kenneth Keith and Craig Urbauer, both of Lincoln, were elected Saturday to the board of directors of the Nebraska Division of the American Cancer Society at the division's annual meeting.

Keith was appointed chairman of the division's Public Education Committee and Urbauer was appointed chairman of the Service and Rehabilitation Committee.

Lord Alfred gets clipped, student fined

A wrestling fan who took a swing at a participant in Monday night's wrestling match at Pershing Auditorium was fined $50 Tuesday for disturbing the peace.

According to police reports, a 19-year-old University of Nebraska-Lincoln student went up behind Lord Alfred Hayes, a "manager" and sometime cohort of wrestler Super Destroyer. The student clipped Lord Alfred in the jaw, police said.

Lincoln man pleads innocent

Ronald Chilen, 3100 T St., was ordered to stand trial during the October jury term.

Tires, tools stolen from Lincoln garage

Burglars made off with some $1,500 worth of goods from a garage in Thomasbrook Apartments Monday night.

According to police reports, missing items included four racing tires, a set of chrome wheels, a hydraulic jack and a tool box containing more than $600 in tools.

Retarded children's rights eyed

The rights of a mentally retarded child can be overlooked in deciding whether the child should undergo sterilization or an abortion, an attorney said Tuesday night.

Because Nebraska lacks a statute, a retarded child can be denied the right to "informed consent" regarding such an operation, said Lincoln attorney Mike Johanns.

Speaking on a panel at a meeting of the Capital Association for Retarded Citizens, Johanns defined informed consent as the patient's right to decide whether to undergo an operation after being told all consequences of the act.

The retarded person often is able to make a decision, he said, but may not be made truly aware of the permanence of an operation such as sterilization.

When a patient is retarded to the point that he cannot make a decision regarding the operation, the parent or guardian usually would be the rightful person to decide, he said.

While the parent or guardian is not guaranteed such rights in Nebraska, he usually exercises them merely by finding a doctor willing to perform the operation, Johanns said.

But sometimes the wishes of the parent and the rights of the retarded child conflict, he said, and there is nothing in state statutes which provide a procedure to resolve the conflict and guarantee the rights of the child.

Come See The Difference

The materials that go into your new home may look good when it's new but what about a couple of years from now. Items like mahogany woodwork, oak cabinets, and MDO siding, and liberal use of brick all add up to bring you a home that looks great not only when it's new but also when you go to sell it a couple of years later. If you're interested in a lasting investment see us today.
